You are now entering Taylor, Texas,

the town that's "Friendly as a Texan's smile." Population 9,616, but still growing. Immediately in front of you is one of our latest pieces of construction, the loop. Look at it, but do not enter because then you will bypass our little town. Our first stop is Murphy Park, where you can find everything from a lake to a zoo. We like it even though it doesn't quite compare to Disneyland. A couple of reasons for continuing progress in our town are the civic clubs and the Chamber of Commerce. They help unite us as a city, yet preserve our many different cultures. Tall water towers are running a close race with the ancient hackberry trees, but signs of advancement are able to mingle nicely in our varied landscape. With new housing additions popping up all over town, it's getting a little harder to find a country road. But for those sun-n-fun lovers, a serene river setting is still only a five-minute drive away. The last stop today is our pride and joy - Taylor High School. Come and look a little closer.

No More Horse and Buggy

In a community as spread out as Taylor, students found many different modes of transportation to school. One survey indicated that there were four basic ways to arrive on campus at THS.

Since school is located just outside of the city limits, only 24% of the student body lives less than a mile away. This portion of the clientele usually found it more convenient to walk or ride a bike to class.

Almost half of the students, 49%, live within a one to four mile radius of the campus. They all find it easy to drive to school and home again for lunch.

Waiting as a half-hour train passes was a familiar scene for 16% of the students. These country folk travelled four to eight miles to school.

The smallest group of students were bus riders. This 11% resided over eight miles away from school.

One way or another, students and teachers alike always made it to school in time to take part in all the activities of a busy year.

Diversity is the word - people from all backgrounds, buildings from all ages, traditions from all cultures. Our small town of Taylor represents different religions, beliefs and loves. Yet we all unite to celebrate who we are, where we are and where we are going.

Against a deep blue sky, this windmill has seen many sunsets in Taylor. The windmill, like other relics of the past, remains active amid Taylor's symbols of progress.

Taylor Ducks, both the human and animal varieties, enjoy the peaceful atmosphere of a warm afternoon at Murphy Park.

Representative of Taylor's various denominations, this contemporary church stands proudly, welcoming its parishioners.

As a part of the school scene, these musicians "band together" to add spirit and fellowship to a notorious Duck pep rally.

A colorful array of lights frames a town bank and serves as a sharp contrast between this modern foundation and one of Taylor's older institutions.

The Taylor Public Library exemplifies the community's yearning for better learning facilities and the ability to do something about it.

In unison, Pep Squad members continue to support their team with cheerful yells and chants.

City Hall houses the town leaders. "City Dads" operate from here to create ordinances and make decisions which serve to improve both physical and abstract situations in Taylor.

Almost with the "speed of sound," Taylor is attracting new businesses, people and ideas.

TAKE TIME OUT FOR WORK AND FUN

With great rejoicing, Taylor students welcomed June. Old routines ended as new ones sprang up. To the 42 summer school students this meant changing from regular school hours to a 7:30-11:30 a.m. class time for the first six weeks of summer. To some the new routines required getting used to working hours and to others the summer held a time of relaxation. But to all of us, June spelled relief from the end-of-year hassles at school.

More time for recreation came with the summer. People always complained that there was nothing to do since Taylor is so small, but even so, its inhabitants usually found something to fill their time. Making the drag and going to Mood's dances filled extra hours for many.

The tennis courts overflowed with people during the day. A few souls pedaled around town on English racers. Swimming and water skiing were ways to beat the heat and people went to Lake Travis, the San Gabriel, and Blue Hole to get a tan the cool way.

The high point of July and the social event of the summer was the Taylor Independence Festival. T.I.F. days brought a dance every night, a parade, a tennis tournament, and a swim meet.

As June and July passed, so did the carefree feeling that came with the summer.

LEISURE EXPIRES — STUDIES PREVAIL

By August, the excitement of summer had faded into boredom. We all tried to cram into those last days all the things we'd meant to do during the summer but hadn't. Yet we had to face the reality of summer's end when the registration schedule came out. While many of us were ready to return to the routine of school, others felt the summer vacation was entirely too short. Nevertheless, the inevitable first day of school arrived bringing with it the confusion of finding classrooms and lockers, changing schedules, and an air of excitement and uncertainty.

The beginning of school is always hectic as everyone tries to settle into a new routine. But September '74 provided a few more distractions than usual. An early taste of winter came at the beginning of the month and caught us off-guard since only a few days earlier we had been scantily attired. A second unexpected diversion occurred when a chemistry lab mishap forced an evacuation of the building. Besides these unplanned happenings, there were enough scheduled events to keep the first full months of school from being humdrum. September produced: introduction night, pep rallies and games, Junior Varsity cheerleader tryouts, senior rings for juniors arrived, classes and clubs held organizational meetings, and class pictures were taken. A look at the activity calendar makes it hard to believe that there was time for class, but we managed to work that in too.

PUMPKIN DAYS GO TO TURKEY CRAZE

Football spirit seemed to fill the air through October and November as the Ducks went into Bi-District play only to suffer a heart-breaking loss to Belton.

Homecoming activities dominated the scene as Nov. 8 was celebrated under the theme "The Way We Were?" In an assembly presented by the Student Senate, contemporaries and exes alike were entertained by the dubious talents of the Marching Kazoo Band and the Duckette football team. All the hard work paid off as the Ducks overpowered their foe both on the scoreboard and at half time.

Excitement due to a renewed ritual, a bonfire, increased spirit twice only to be dampened each time. According to tradition it rained before the Homecoming game and we could proudly boast, "No one can hold a match to our bonfire!" In an effort to rebuild the ill-fated pile of boxes after it was thoughtlessly burned to the ground by vandals, four THS students suffered serious injuries in a truck mishap.

So the gridiron season was over. But when footballs were dropped, spirits still soared as basketballs dribbled in.

November also provided a much needed break for all school personnel when Thanksgiving rolled in. However, as all good things must come to an end, so must Turkey Day Holidays, which paved the way into a cold December.

Thoughts Turn to Yuletide Season

With the beginning of December, students turned their thoughts to two weeks of vacation during the Christmas holidays. Yuletide spirit was boosted by FTA's door decorating contest and Drama Club's version of A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Classes resumed on January 2, 1975, and students were involved in district basketball, preparations for the Band trip to the Mardi Gras and mid-term tests.

Although students did not have a White Christmas in Taylor, they did get some snow on January 12. Even though it did not stay forever, students had the chance to throw a snowball or two before it melted.

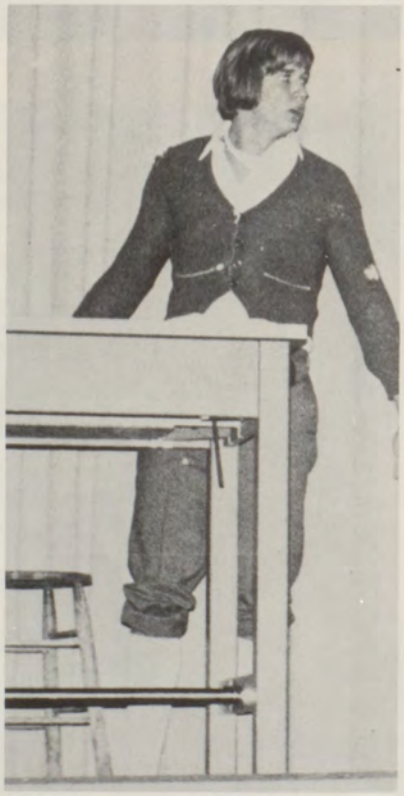

December and January was not too early for seniors to think of their education after graduation as they took entrance exams for college, while underclassmen began thinking about summer and another year of school.

Various reactions were brought on by three assemblies during January. Sam Gainer, Band of the West and the Sunshine Show performed.

After finishing nine weeks and mid-term tests, students could begin to think of the last half of the school year and graduation.

Events Abound, Not Boredom

February and March brought a flurry of activities. The intercom system announced more club and class meetings and upcoming events.

On Fridays in February, conventions and contests took many students out of town. The Band participated in the Mardi Gras parade. Hi-Steppers and Distributive Education classes journeyed out of town for their contests. Future Teachers also left for their convention.

Besides our students leaving town, we had tracksters converging for the Cotton Boll Relays. Inside school, February proved to be the month for lovers as F.T.A. sponsored the carnation sale. School-shaking news arrived when people learned that the administration for next year would be different.

March winds brought changes of weather from warm to nearly freezing days. On the bright days, there were baseball and tennis games. Organizations expanded their memberships as National Honor Society and MALLARD announced new members.

Band members competed for ratings at Solo and Ensemble and played host to schools for Concert and Sightreading. Vocational Office Education students won honors at their contest, and Future Homemakers of America attended an area meet. Along with these events, the Junior class supplied a barbeque supper before a concert given by the Hardin-Simmons University Band.

Last Stages of Finality

The final two months of school brought a climax to the year with a surge of end-of-the-year activities. Various clubs and organizations held banquets, initiations, and chose new officers for the coming year.

Winning first at the State Meet in Dallas, the Vocational Office Education Parliamentary Procedure team advanced to national competition in Chicago. University Interscholastic League Literary contest was here for the second year and several of our students placed in the various events. Those trying out for Hi-Steppers, Twirlers or Drum Majors spent many hours learning routines.

"An Evening in Paradise" was the theme for the prom on which the juniors worked diligently to prepare. After receiving a I at Concert Contest, the Concert Choir took a three day tour to several North Texas towns. Library Club hosted a Bicentennial Day on April 18th to celebrate Taylor's centennial. On this occasion, a number of speakers were on hand in the library for everyone to hear after the assembly.

For some seniors, trying to keep an A average so as to be exempt from finals was a great task, while others found it difficult enough just to pass in order to graduate. However, graduation day came sooner than expected. With all the tears of happiness and sadness, seniors experienced the first step to a future all their own.

Literary Magazine Is Revived

In 1921, THE STUDENT'S QUILL appeared and disappeared at Taylor High School. Now, half a century later, a literary magazine reappeared titled ETC.

This bi-annual magazine was created to give recognition to those who have talent in the various expressions of communication. ETC. consisted of original contributions of students - poems, pictures, short stories and drawings.

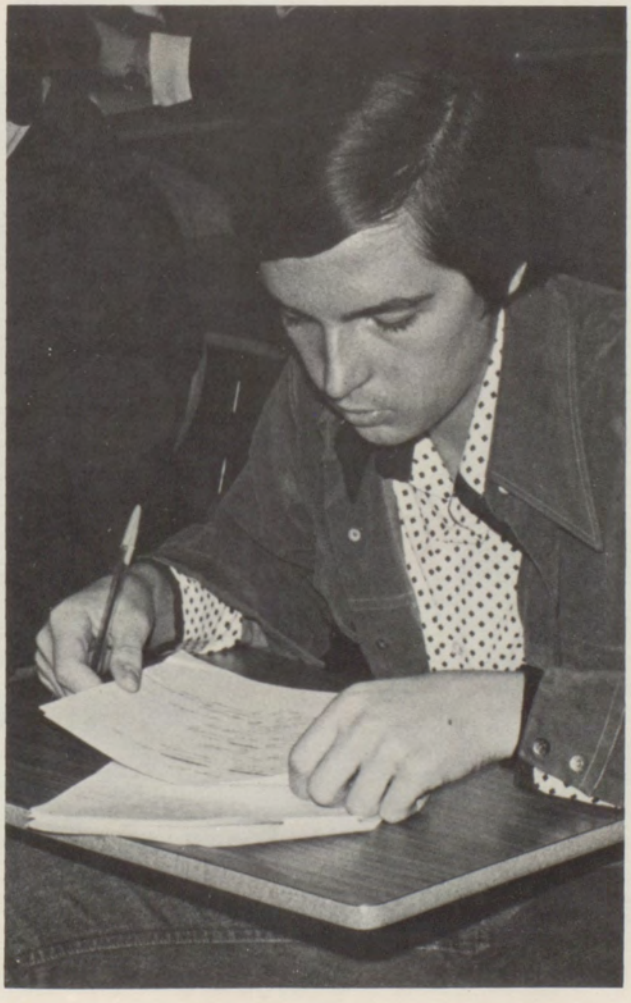

It was business as usual in English classes with students producing compositions, research reports, plays, skits and book reports. Latin and Spanish classes immersed themselves in cultural and language development.

Dedication Is the Key to Achievement

Skits, speeches and commercials filled class time for many Speech I and II students. These were put to practical use in preparing some students for the one act play, the Optimist Club speech contest and University Interscholastic League literary events.

Both MALLARD and COTTON BOLL staffers were constantly trying to beat the calendar to meet deadlines. Headlines had to count right, copy had to fit and pages had to be proofread. To help solve various problems and to acquire newer and better ideas, both staffs attended the Interscholastic League Press Conference convention at the University of Texas in Austin.

Historians Explore Past and Present

Students in jail, barricades in the hall - a student revolt? No, just social studies class projects in action.

While studying human behavior, sociology classes conducted an interesting experiment by placing a "wet floor" sign on the dry hall floor to see how everyone would react. At first, everyone just looked at the sign and detoured. Finally, one brave soul broke the barrier and then crowds followed. Civics students took a field trip to the local jail and ran city offices for one day. Texas History classes made an in-depth study on the past of Texas to gain more knowledge on their state.

For World History and American History, interviewing the elderly, watching films, doing newspaper exercises, taking notes and working work sheets made dates, places, people and causes take on a deeper meaning.

New Ideas, New Labs, New Results

Science classes were reduced to physical science, biology and chemistry as there was no physics class. Most students felt that the three classes were plenty to handle.

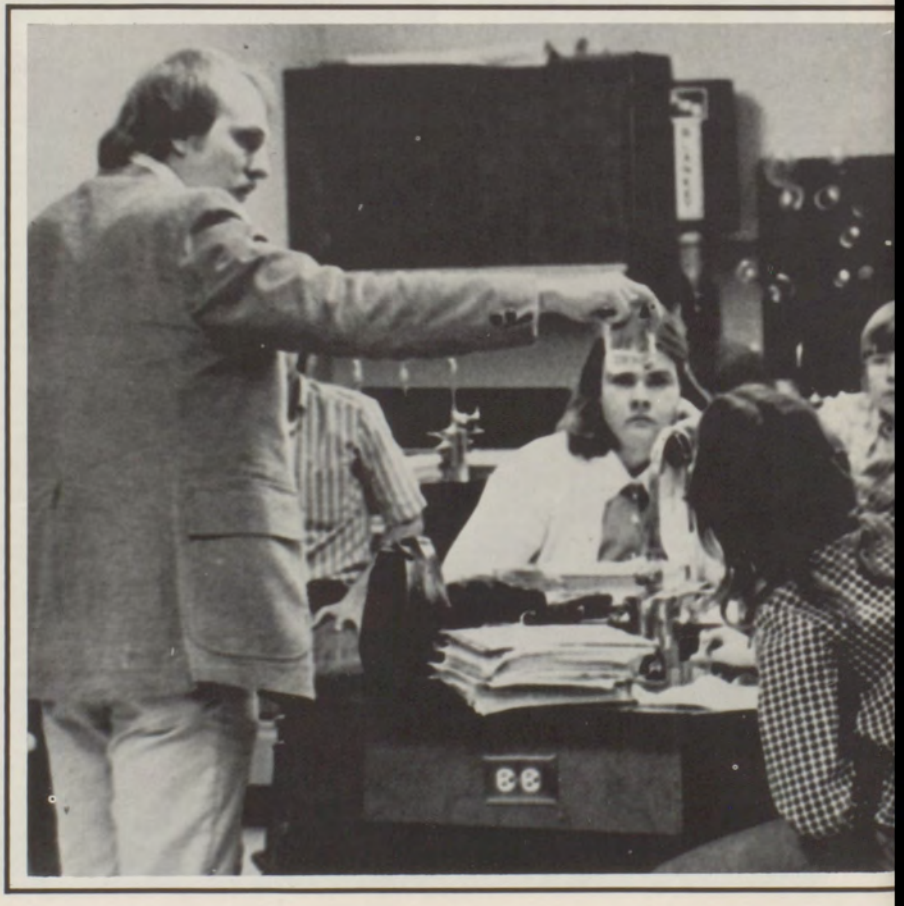

Students in the physical science classes changed from the traditional teaching to a lab-type situation. Actually working with batteries, simple machines and chemicals helped explain scientific concepts.

The biology classes continued doing labs based on currently learned material. Dissecting frogs and typing blood were the most infamous labs, enjoyable to some but bringing shudders to others.

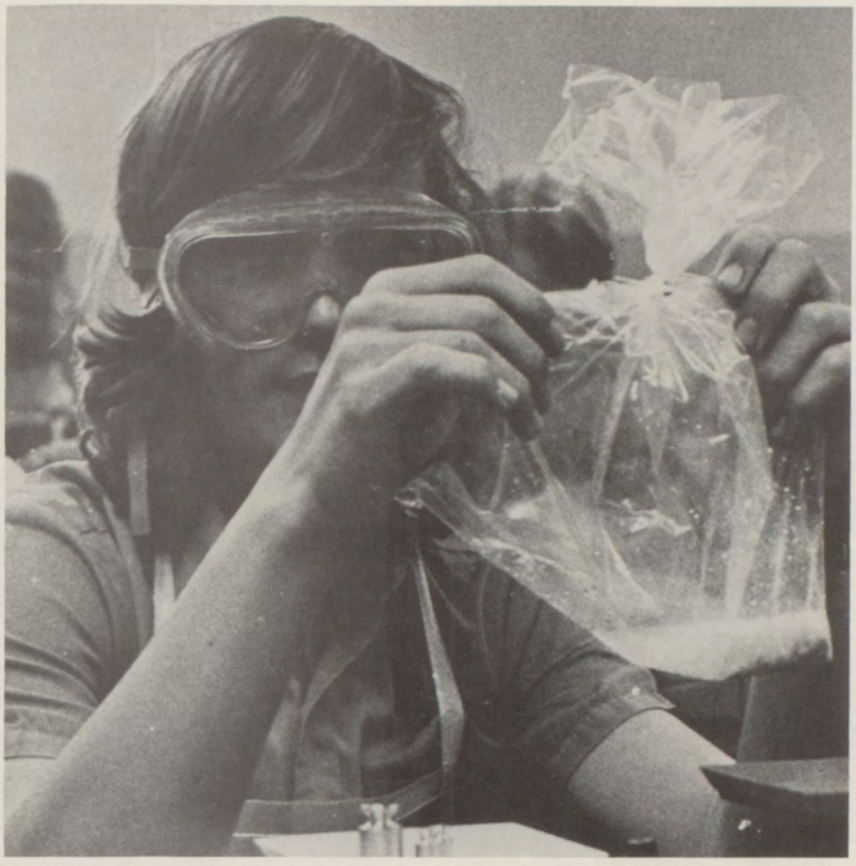

Although the chemistry classes were still taught in the straight-from-the-book way, they were never dull. They had surprises from the evacuation of the school due to a dropped bottle of bromine to a stray kitten in the chemistry room.

Throughout the year, science classes brought groans because they were so difficult but they also challenged students with new concepts and experiences.

Mathematics was one of the widest ranges of courses offered. From Related Math to Trigonometry, classes were filled with concentration, problems and lots of erasers.

Since two years of math are required, all students experienced the assignments during high school. Math was a drudge for some whose minds were not made in the logical vein, but others loved the intricacies of the math problems.

Whether struggling through the two years, or taking extra classes, math students shared certain things in common - a dread of tests, a satisfaction in completing a problem and relief when the year was over.

Special Aid for Special People

Besides the normal classroom situations, Taylor High also offered a different setting for students who found problems in keeping up with their classmates.

Resource labs were for students who had no learning disabilities and normal capabilities. These students were deprived of the necessary basic skills in their early years. Consequently, these students became one or more grade levels behind their classmates. Resource rooms enabled them to improve reading and math skills.

A special services room provided a space for students with special problems. People with learning disabilities who needed individualized help in certain subjects were in this program. The concept was aimed to get these students in as many regular classrooms as possible and also had them earning credits by working at jobs.

Musicians at Taylor High discovered that practice was the key to a successful performance. Daily, both band and choir rehearsed selections over and over in preparation for concerts, assemblies, contests and various other performances. Balance, blend and tuning were three major concerns which our musicians had to deal with. Excitement over superior ratings, choir members making district and region choir, the band's trip to the Mardi Gras and having other talented musicians come and perform made 1975 a record year for our music makers.

Students Learn Skill From Vocation Program

The Vocational Education program continued to grow this year with more courses being offered and more students being involved in the program.

Students were given the opportunity to learn a trade through on-the-job training. Not only did the program teach students a trade but also a possible profession upon graduation from high school.

Fitness, Fun: A Healthy Combination

Setting speed records for dressing in less than five minutes, both boys' and girls' physical education classes had a busy year participating in many different sports.

Daily classes started off with various exercises and then students would participate in a variety of athletic activities.

When weather permitted, boys' classes ventured outside to play flag football or softball, while girls participated in track or softball.

One day out of the week was devoted to studying the functions of the human body.

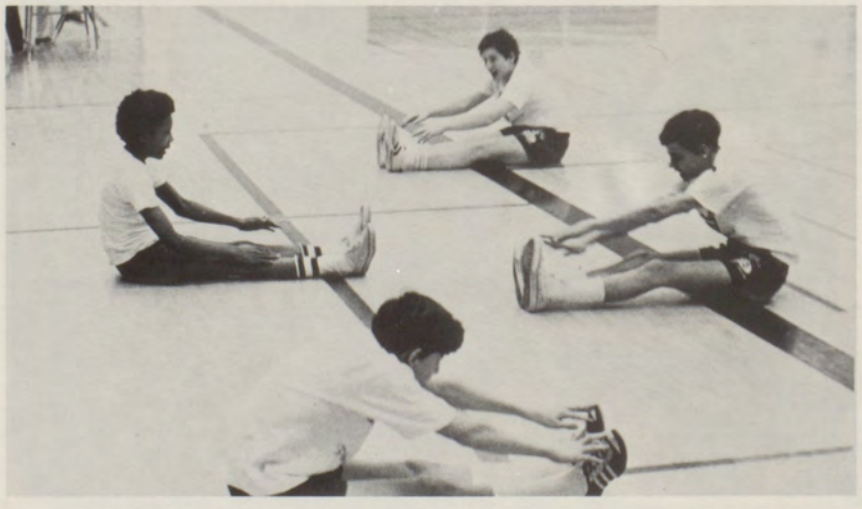

Physical education classes went past the definition, training and developing the human body, but brought about good fun in athletics.

Girls Gain Top Honors

Valedictorian Kandice Poldrack has many academic honors to her credit. In addition to being an honor graduate, she was awarded the National Honor Society Scholarship, received the academic award three years, won University Interscholastic League Band medals, placed in Interscholastic League Press Conference competition, was named to Who's Who 1974-1975, and she was awarded the Danforth Foundation Award. Kandice's activities reflected her responsibility. She was president of the Future Teachers of America, MALLARD editor, NHS treasurer, Band section leader and a Student Senate member.

Salutatorian Marianne Ponton was presented with the Balfour Award in addition to winning three academic awards and several Band medals. Besides serving as vice president of the Band, Marianne also sang in the Concert Choir and Women's Choir. A member of NHS and vice president of Teens Aid the Retarded, she also filled the position of business manager for the newly created literary magazine, ETC. Marianne's popularity is evident as she has been elected by her peers as a goodfellow, Choir sweetheart, Band sweetheart, Homecoming queen, Cotton Boll Relays queen and Miss THS.

15 Seniors Come Out on Top

Honor graduates had much more on their hands besides just studying for good grades. Extracurricular clubs and organizations had them involved in school functions almost constantly. At top is a graph indicating the number of top grads in various clubs. Honor graduates are Greg Teggeman, Curtis Stauffer, Mike Bachmeyer, David Honeycutt, Karen Remmel, Marianne Ponton, Candy Walker, Kandice Poldrack, Alice Aanstoos, Arthur Frerichs, Donald Randig, Debbie Vega, Janice Kaspar, Sofie Perez and Griffin Teggeman.

Literary Academes Have Winning Form

Winning first at district in headline writing, Greg Teggeman eventually found himself copping second at state.

Others who earned top spots at the district meet in Taylor were Alice Aanstoos, second in headline writing; David Wolbrueck, third in spelling; and Jimmy Scrivner, third in persuasive speaking. All four students then advanced to regional competition and spent the weekend in Corpus Christi.

13 Musicians Lead THS

WHO'S WHO

In conjunction with National Honor Society, MALLARD offered a new system for recognizing the school's outstanding scholars. Criteria for selection included responsible attitude, class participation, self-discipline and a proven desire to learn. The following departments chose to honor their outstanding student.

ENGLISH
David Honeycutt
Imagination always held a prominent place in David's writing. He was able to maintain an A average in English IV through his work, whether it was a humorous political satire or philosophical prose. Several of his stories found themselves in the ETC.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE
Stella Taliaferro
Stella has managed to hold on to the highest average in her Spanish I class. Besides having a good book knowledge, she is able to understand and speak the language well.

SOCIAL STUDIES
Barbara Huser
As a student of World History, Barbara is outstanding in her class. She always understands concepts raised by the teacher due to her deep interest and concern in the past.

MATH
Kandice Poldrack
Taking two math courses this year would be almost impossible for anyone but Kandice. She had steady high A's in both Algebra II and trig and she plans to major in math. Kandice also had the distinction of being the only female in the trig class.

SCIENCE
Kathryn Kotrla
Kathryn has taken every science course offered at THS and has always had a superior average. She furthered her interest this year by being a teacher's aide in physical science classes. Kathryn's future plans include a major in science.

PRE-EMPLOYMENT LAB PROGRAMS
Ray Hernandez
Ray has been instrumental in helping his Building Trades class construct a home.

VOCATIONAL HOME ECONOMICS
Debra Shamard
Debra is a three year member of Future Homemakers of America and served this year as first vice president.

PUBLICATIONS
Craig Stafford
A member of both the COTTON BOLL and MALLARD staffs, Craig served as photographer the past two years. Several of his pictures won him prizes during the year, including the Interscholastic League Press Conference and COTTON BOLL contests.

SPEECH
Philip Hohle
A two time member of the All Star Cast at District, Philip's most recent honor was being named to the elite cast for his performance in "Goodbye to the Clown." He also participated in speech contests and was previously named "Ham of the Year" by On Stage '74.

VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURE
David Welch
Only a freshman, David has already exemplified skill and leadership qualities in his Vo-Ag class.

VOCATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE PROGRAMS
Daniel Talasek
Daniel has been active in Distributive Education for the past two years.

MUSIC
Jan Walker
In addition to serving as Drum Major this year, Jan was also baritone section leader. Although she was not enrolled in Choir, she accompanied the singers on piano during the second semester. As a reward for her musical talents, she received a scholarship to Blinn College.

Two Picked by Peers

Larry Burnett, Mr. THS, was an active football player through all four years of high school. He participated in Future Farmers of America and was an officer of Latin Club. He enjoyed hunting, cars and playing pool. With college still in mind for the future, he planned on working on pipeline construction after school.

This was not the first time for Marianne Ponton, Miss THS, to be honored by her peers. She had previously been named sweetheart for both Choir and Band, queen for Homecoming and the Cotton Boll Relays and Goodfellow. She was also in National Honor Society and Teens Aid the Retarded. Marianne took her Salutatorian standing to Baylor University.

Queens, Beaux: Popularity Reigns

Queens are Sandra Mazac, Future Farmers sweetheart; Ophal Reese, Choir sweetheart and Marianne Ponton, Band sweetheart, Homecoming Queen and Cotton Boll Relays Queen and their beaux are Griffin Teggeman, Future Homemakers Beau; Curtis Stauffer, Band Beau and Kevin Gault, Choir Beau.

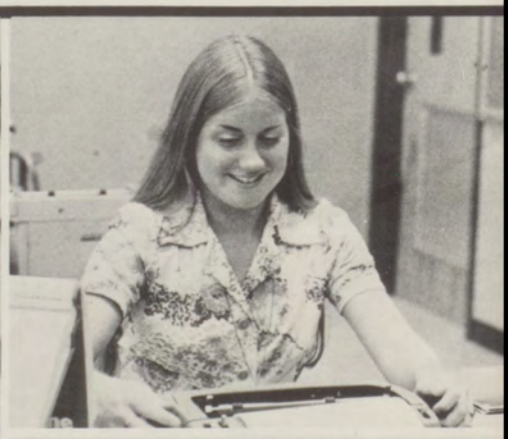

Nominees in the various popularity races are Theresa Leschber, Joy Ponkoney, Donna Barron and Sandra Mazac. Also Sharon Nickerson, Jan Walker, Pam Carmack, Sharon Brown and Cynthia Harrell. And George Torres, Valerie Cox, Sherry Pasemann, Stancie Schwenker, Johnny Roose and David Sikes.

Personality + Smiles → Goodfellows

Goodfellows are chosen by their peers on the basis of personality, involvement and campus awareness. MALLARD staff, who ran the election, revamped the procedure this year. In the past seniors chose ten Goodfellows, juniors named eight, sophomores took six and freshmen had four. The new system allowed four individuals to be chosen from each class - two girls and two boys. The change was well accepted by the student body as it went practically unnoticed. Reactions from being named a Goodfellow varied from a cool "Thanks" to a more surprised "Who, me?"

Athletics provided a special diversion away from a strenuous academic life. Students and teachers alike were able to enjoy sports in classes and intramurals. More than this however, the entire community benefited from the enjoyment sports had to offer.

REPLAYS

Record Best for Ducks in 3A Play

Taylor Ducks finished the season with an 8-2-1 record, the best showing since Taylor joined 12AAA.

Offensively the Ducks gained 3,377 yards, 2,433 of these yards coming on the ground and passing 944 yards. Averaging 307 total offensive yards a game, the Ducks scored 245 points in eleven games for a 22.3 average. A tough defense allowed only 108 points in eleven games for a 9.8 average. Opponents could only muster an average of 106 yards on the ground and 63 yards in the air. A 4-0 record in south zone play allowed Taylor to play the Belton Tigers for the district crown. After a very close three quarters, the Tigers took the lead 21 to 14 with 2:42 left to play. The Ducks fought back but were halted when Belton intercepted a pass on their 11-yard line. With this, visions of a state play-off berth vanished as the final seconds ticked off the clock. A district title will have to wait till next year but as the Ducks continue to grow in experience and enthusiasm, the district title is in reach.

JV Season Shines Bright With Wins

The Taylor Junior Varsity put together a winning season with a 4-3 record, highlighted by a victory over the previously undefeated Belton Tigers.

After getting off to a slow start, losing three of the first four games, the Taylor JV turned the season around winning the final three games. After a crushing defeat at the hands of the Gatesville Hornets the JV rallied to defeat the Belton JV Tigers 30-26. This was the first time the Belton JV had lost in twenty-six games.

Although the Taylor JV play ended abruptly with the cancellation of the final two games against Round Rock and Rockdale, their season was not yet over as their marked style of play earned them a berth on the 1974 South Zone Champion Taylor Duck Varsity.

Fish Streak to Victory

The Taylor Duck Freshmen playing with abandon all season ended their play with a fine 8-1 record blemished only by the Belton Tigers.

Spear-headed on offense by Lester Zachary, Leonard Burnett, Michael Pittman, and an explosive offensive line the underclassmen amassed 2,265 yards rushing on the season for an average of 251 yards per game.

Behind the golden arms of Keith Reiger and Clarence Wooldridge the Freshmen threw for 525 yards for an average of 58 yards per game.

Freshman Coach Danny Potts best summoned up this year's freshman squad by claiming, "They're the best team I've ever coached."

Cagers Tally 19 Wins

Varsity roundballers completed the basketball season with only six losses. Unfortunately, four of these losses were in South Zone play and the Ducks finished third in zone.

Play did prove to be full of excitement with five games being decided by three points or less.

Through the 19-6 season the varsity averaged 64 points a game while holding their opponents to 53 points average per game.

Losing to only three different teams, the Ducks were strong contenders throughout the season. "We did our best and that's all anyone can ask," said Shirl Frazier, coach.

Hustle Marks JV Play

A team lacking in height and number, the Junior Varsity finished the season with an 11-11 record. Three of these losses came in the Taylor tournament to Varsity teams.

The JV unit was hurt by slow starts averaging 11 points during the first quarter but came on to average 53 points a game.

Highlighting the season was a 97-23 trouncing of TSD and a 40-39 victory over Gatesville with the last five minutes of the game being played by only four Ducks.

This hustle and determination made up for the lack of height and players and marked their style of play throughout the season.

Practice Paves Way for Fish Season

Running lines, working on fast breaks and zone defenses proved to be helpful in putting together a 10-5 record for the Freshmen roundballers.

Coached by Danny Potts, the Fish used three different zone defenses to shut down opponents through the entire season.

All in all, the year provided useful experience for the young Duck roundballers who will, in the near future, be the nucleus of varsity action.

New Coach New Beginning

Duck tracksters got a slow start out of the blocks this season as they were plagued by injuries until District. However, Leon Nickerson's troops pulled together to gather fourth place honors at the District meet in the tough eleven team field.

Midway through the season Joel Smith and Kevin Gault were elected track captains by their peers.

The team was especially strong in the field events as Gary Lankford and Bruce Turner placed in every meet. Both went on to capture the top echelon in their specialty as Gary jumped 14 feet to win the State pole vault and Bruce high jumped 6 feet 11 inches to set a new State record.

Bigger and Better Girls Track Team

With only three girls participating in the girls track program last year, the seven girls this year proved that girls track was getting bigger and better.

At District Ophelia Jewel, coach, and her tracksters finished fourth place with Chestina Martin qualifying for Regional.

Martin then took second at regional for a berth in the state high jump. At the state meet in Austin she captured third place for her jump of five feet three inches.

As girls track grows, title hopes are high for next year.

Still Champs to Us

With an 8-0 record, the girls volleyball team found themselves at the threshold of the district championship.

Though they lost the district game to Belton, they did not feel discouraged about the performance of the team.

Because there were just enough players for one team, the girls were at a great disadvantage compared to other teams with a full squad of substitutions.

According to Ophelia Jewel, coach of the volleyballers, they had a much better team than last year; however, if they could have had more players, they would have had a better team.

And Another Winning Season

Continuing the dominance over the District, the tennis team won the District title for the seventh consecutive year.

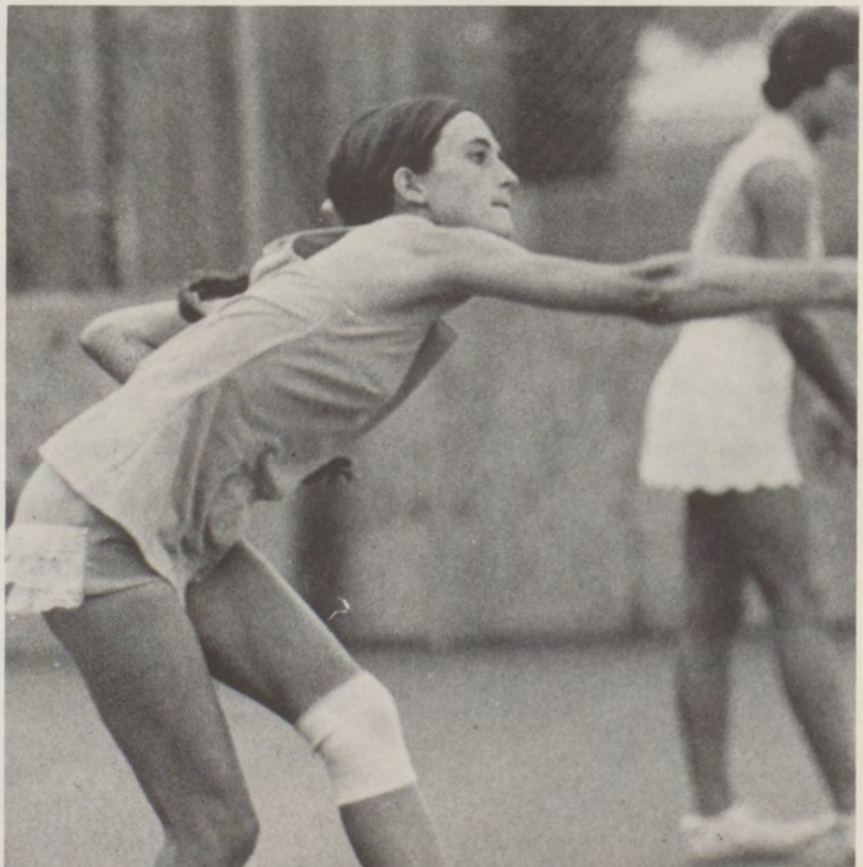

In the girls' division at District, Lisa Corbett and Laurie Pasemann finished first and second in singles. In doubles Janis West and Vickie Simcik repeated as District champs, took second at regional and qualified for the State tourney.

Freshman Jay Harkins finished second in boys' singles, but lost to the eventual four-time State champion at Regional. The doubles team of Doug Cotner and Kelly Zetak took first at District and advanced to Regional.

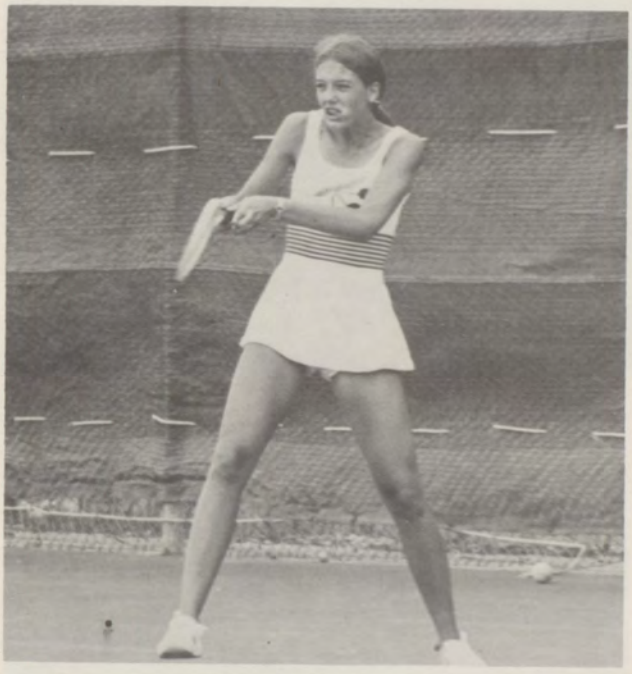

With all coming back, hopes are high for an eighth straight title.

Inexperience Takes Its Toll

Rebuilding was the key for the golf team as only two lettermen returned from the previous year. Youth and inexperience hindered the team throughout tournament play this year.

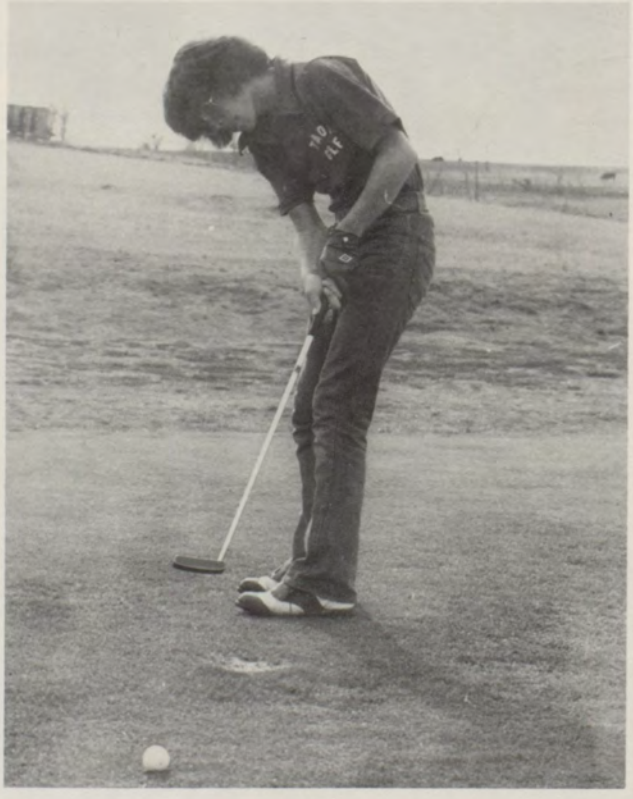

Although not winning any tournaments the team paved the way for next year as all the players return next year as veterans.

Dan Wuthrick plus second year men Mikey Kirschvink and Ricky Alford were the nucleus of this year's squad while enroute to an eighth place finish at District.

From the knowledge gained, the lackluster year should be overshadowed by the brighter days ahead for the golf team.

Another Year: Same Champs

In the first Zone baseball game, Taylor's hope of a fifth consecutive District title started to look slim as Lockhart beat the Ducks.

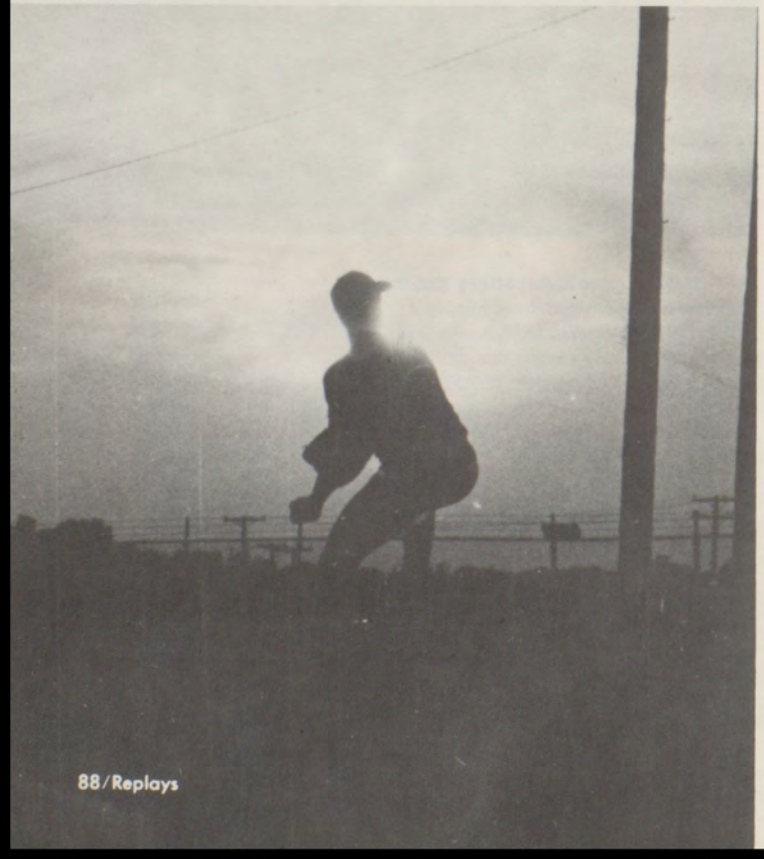

While the team compiled a 22-8 record, Brad Ross was busy breaking his goal for most stolen bases in a season with 25. Tommy Kaspar broke the record for most strikeouts in a season with 133.

But the Ducks hung together and won the next seven zone games followed by two district victories over Georgetown for the 12AAA Title.

For the third straight year Taylor faced Brenham in Bi-District but lost 1-0 in the third game.

Winning District is becoming as common as hot dogs, apple pie and baseball.

Competition Among Friends

A growing part of lunchtime, the Intramural Program occupied the time of numerous students as well as Leon Nickerson, coach.

The various sports gave those students who did not participate in Interscholastic League Athletics a chance to partake in the fun of volleyball, basketball, ping pong and softball.

Spirit From Skits and Signs

Cheerleading started before school did. The newly elected and veteran cheerleaders went to Southern Methodist University for a summer camp. Activities started with school, and the cheerleaders were ready to encourage spirit.

Signs in the halls and in the gym were made by cheerleaders. Throughout the year, they supplied locker signs for players in all sports. Cheerleaders also joined with the football team in a candy sale.

The cheerleaders planned all the pep rallies to get the support of the student body. During the year, spirit for the school was generated with signs, spirit sticks and pep rallies which is what cheerleading is all about.

Lights, cameras, ACTION! Taylor High is similar to any stage where each actor has a part to play. Various interests of each student create an involved plot for the story of '75.

Student Government — No Watergate

Characteristic of past Student Senates, poor attendance was common at early Senate meetings. But interest picked up with a deluge of activities.

Since Taylor was elected as district first vice president, hosting the fall convention became their responsibility. At the spring convention, Senate officers conducted a leadership workshop.

When it rains it pours. Ask any Senator who also worked for two solid weeks to construct another top-notch Homecoming Assembly.

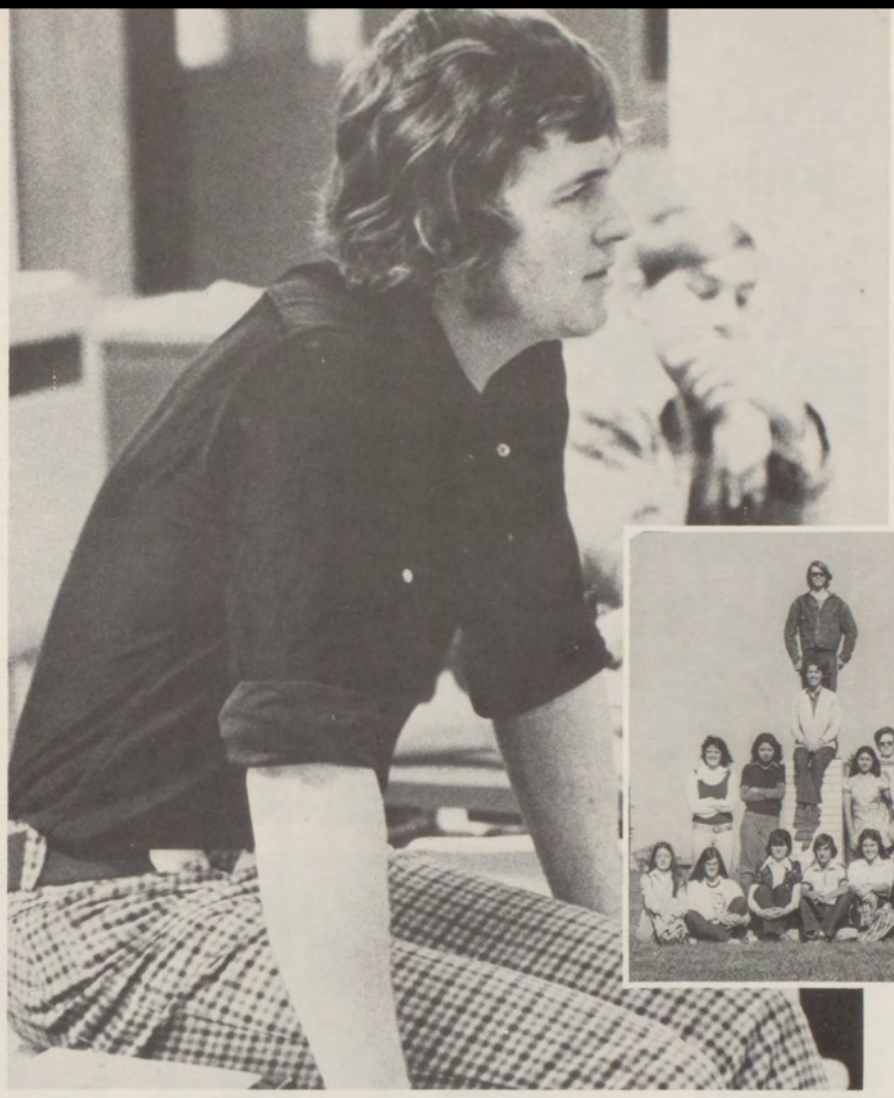

Along with regular duties of scheduling assemblies, conducting Cotton Boll Relays and Homecoming Queen nominations, the Senate topped off the year by running Mr. and Miss THS elections.

Many Have Wing Ding at NHS Spring Fling

"Spring Fling" was the major project of the National Honor Society this year. Its purpose was to raise money for the annual NHS scholarship and to involve all organizations. Various clubs had booths including a cake walk, a pie throw, a pony ride, a white elephant sale, a movie, a dart throw and various others.

Since NHS was unable to run the Cotton Boll Relays concession stand as in previous years, they decided to sell posters. Though this was a different type of project, it was not very successful.

In the Spring 23 students were added to the club under a new method of choosing. Students interested had to apply thus eliminating those who were not interested in belonging to NHS.

The induction ceremony of new members was held at Rowe Valley. This ceremony, which was led by the officers, was to explain to new members why they were chosen. Officers for 1975-76 school year were also presented at this time.

Active Librarians Alter the Scene

Many changes occurred during the year for the hard-working Library Club.

A new sponsor, Mary Jean Livingood, helped start the year off right by encouraging members to help make the library a more interesting and informative place for students.

A field trip to the LBJ Library and KLRN-TV in Austin added a bit of enjoyment as well as knowledge to the club activities. Members went to Anderson High School to see how another type of library works.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce donated $350 to help pay for the new set of Encyclopedia Britannicas and Annals of America. To pay the remaining $250, the club took funds from their T-shirt sale which was their money-making project in the early school months.

Bicentennial Day at Taylor High was the major spring project sponsored by the Library Club. An assembly with State Representative Dan Kubiak was the main activity for the day.

Slaves Gain Freedom From Oppression

With 12 new slaves and 34 returning citizens, Latin Club once again began another year portraying Latin culture in various ways. To supplement the knowledge gained in class, the meetings incorporated films and skits displaying ancient Roman life.

"Circus Maximus" was the theme of the banquet and initiation. After the meal which was served by the slaves, juggling and chariot races were performed. Then began the initiation of the slaves and the punishment of bad slaves. Once this was over the president of the club freed the slaves whose first duty as citizens was to remain and clean up the gigantic mess.

New Ideas and Annual Events

Since 1956, Spanish Club has been a part of the scene at Taylor High. The third sponsor in the history of the organization, Lupe Ramirez, came this year and brought new ideas for projects. The membership consisted of 40 people, and new members underwent the rigors of an initiation in September.

A candy sale began the projects early in the year. On February 8, Spanish Club prepared tacos for the annual Mexican Food supper. Members started a cold drink tumbler sale in April and provided a place for aspiring artists to produce spin-art at the Spring Fling booth. A bake sale provided a final money raising event.

The money went to provide the ingredients of a Thanksgiving basket for a needy family. Then the top 15 members traveled to the Pan American Student Forum Convention in San Antonio. The top members also journeyed to Mexico on a one day trip. All members gathered at the end of the year for a banquet at Rudy Mikeska's.

"Extra! Extra! Read All About It!"

Even though much writing was done on the night before a deadline, the COTTON BOLL always appeared on the assigned date.

From political editorials to humorous satires, the school newspaper always had something to offer each student. When the best news stories, features, cartoons, ads, etc. were chosen, they were entered in several contests including the Texas High School Press Association and the Interscholastic League Press Conference.

Early in the year, combined Journalism I and II classes journeyed to Austin to tour the University of Texas student publications, KTBC television station and the Austin-American facilities. Later, six staff members attended the Southwest Journalism Forum at Southern Methodist University.

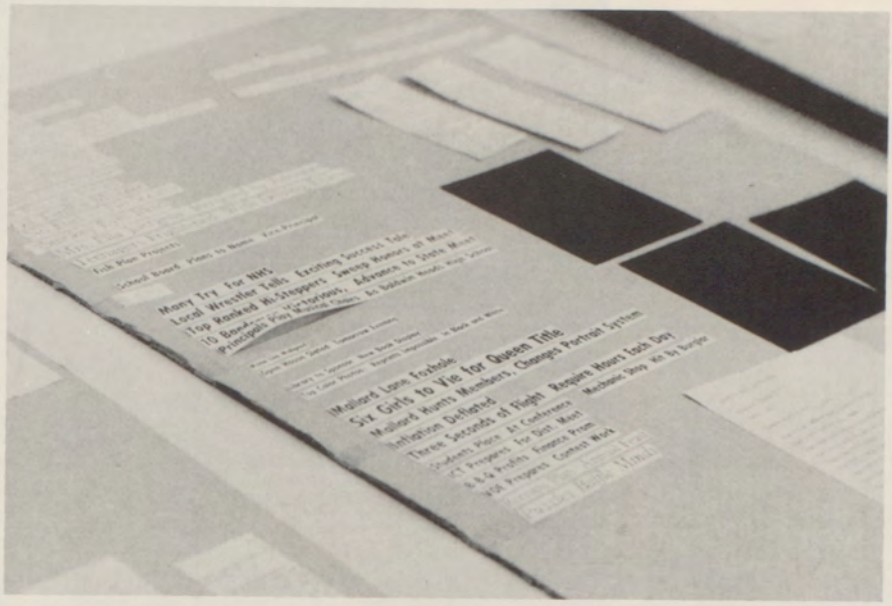

Laying out the paper was a particular duty for JII'ers. This was an awesome task, especially when four additional pages were thrown together at the last minute in order to get all contest material printed. This probably would not have been possible if the staff did not work on in-service holidays.

COTTON BOLL sponsored a school-wide photo contest for the first time. The event was successful with many amazing prints being entered by industrious photographers.

The only money-making project for the year was selling pictures. Camera bugs from both publication staffs joined together on this job and used their profit to buy a new enlarger for the darkroom.

One Goal — One Result

Though school began the last week in August, the MALLARD staff began working in midsummer for their goal, the completed MALLARD.

The staff spent three of the most exhausting days of the year helping photographers take class pictures, senior portraits and organization pictures.

The tedious work of trying to reach deadlines kept everyone working morning, lunch and night. Photographers spent hours on end in the darkroom printing pictures, and yet the staff never seemed to have enough. Copy staff searched their minds for cutlines, headlines and copy. For precise layouts, the page design staff worked with photographers for the right effect. Proofreading the pages was a great task because many pages had to be redone and corrections typed.

Everyone felt a terrific sense of relief when the final deadline was met. At the same time, a great feeling of curiosity and excitement filled them as they waited for the day the yearbooks would arrive.

Entertainment in Town, on Tour

From Glee Club to Concert Choir and Choraliers, choirs entertained audiences.

For the Belton halftime presentation, the Choir sang in a patriotic show. Choirs participated in the Homecoming and Easter assemblies. Both Concert Choir and Choraliers starred in individual concerts.

Choir members entered contests and received top ratings on their performances. Twelve singers won a position in the District Choir and one went on to sing in Region Choir. Concert Choir traveled to Contest making a I in concert and a II in sightreading.

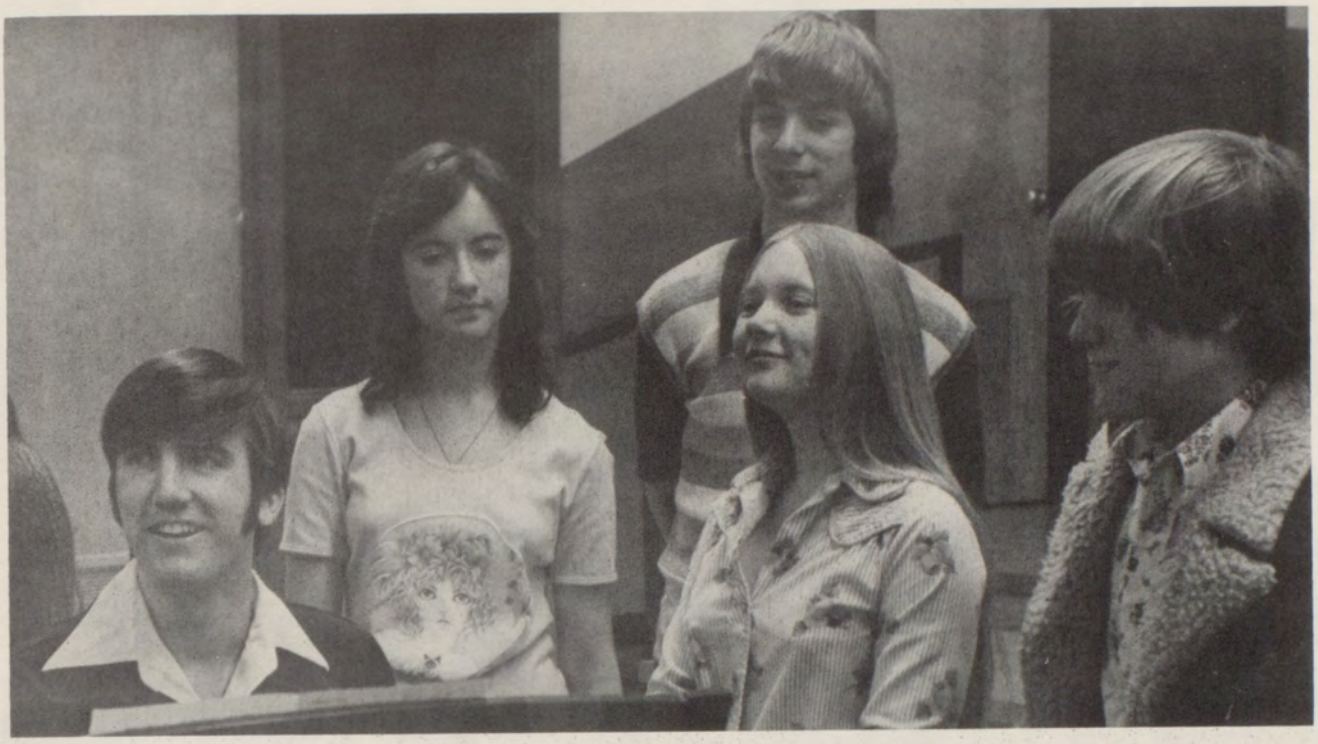

Trips for the Choirs came at the end of the year when Choraliers visited Aquarena Springs and Concert Choir went on tour.

Mardi Gras Trip — Focus on Reality

When the possibility of a trip to the Mardi Gras in New Orleans was first presented to the Band, no one believed it would actually come true. With many community contributions as well as profits from various projects, the trip became a reality. Departing on Saturday morning, February 1, Bandsmen set out for New Orleans. Arriving in Kenner, Louisiana later than expected, the exhausted musicians settled down for their first night's stay. They were chosen to lead the seven mile Mardi Gras parade and everyone began to wonder if it would ever end as it seemed to drag on and on. When at last they dissembled, Bandsmen headed on to Jennings to rest their aching feet. After a concert at Jennings High School the next morning and a short shopping spree in Houston they returned home.

Rain prevailed throughout most of the football season and often prevented the Band from marching. Much hard work went into preparation for various contests through the year and they made an excellent rating at Concert contest.

The City Commission named the Band as official emissary of the city of Taylor as a Bicentennial City. They helped to start the celebration by presenting a concert at the "Bicentennial Kick-off." Also at the end of the year the Band received the Bicentennial flag which will be carried at all their future performances.

Involvement and Action With Support the Goal

One of the most active and involved organizations in Taylor High was the Pep Squad. Pep Squad members were always willing to participate in any event that encouraged the football or basketball teams on to a winning season.

Each week that had a football game, Pep Squad members circulated throughout the school selling ribbons and showing their support of the team. Also at football games, they distributed programs, often having fewer than they needed as the crowds became larger and larger.

Among their other activities, the Pep Squad helped to brighten the school by making spirit signs. The Pep Squad led the school in spirit, always ready to aid in spirit-raising projects around school.

Work Yields Success

Work started early for Hi-Steppers and 1974-75 developed into a full and very successful year. After school practices and extra hours proved to be worthwhile as the year went on.

Along with learning routines, time was used in money-raising projects. Hi-Steppers helped in the selling of ads for the football programs. Then at Homecoming, Hi-Steppers handled the mum sale. Practice intensified during the football season to perfect a new performance for every game and some pep rallies.

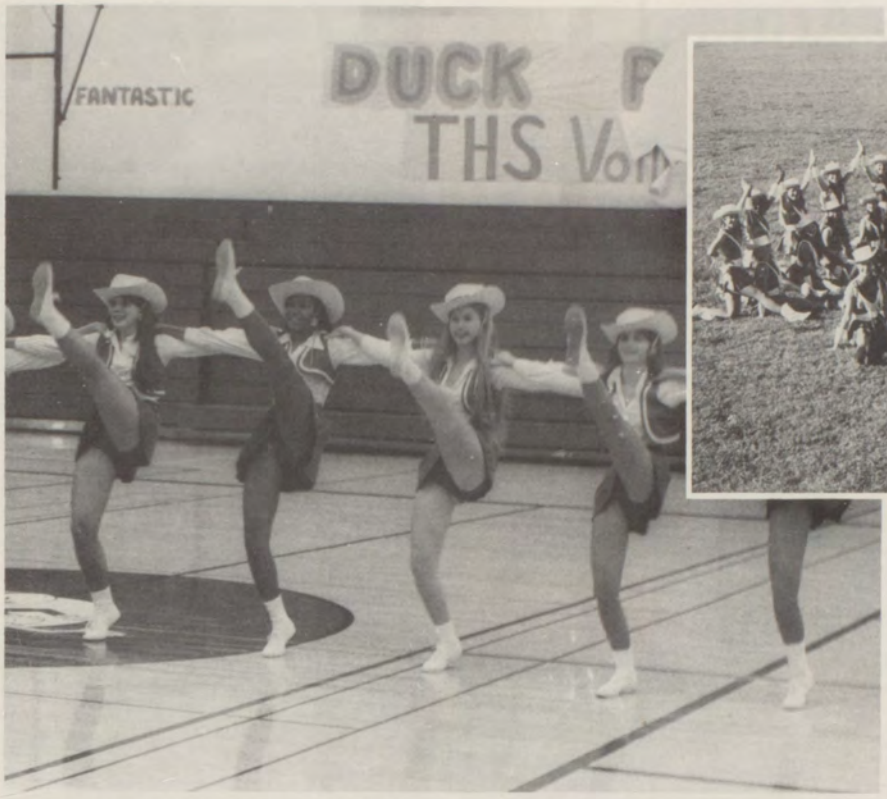

An extraordinary treat was in store for the senior officers who were chosen to march as the flag bearers for the Band at the Mardi Gras. However, the real reward for a year of hard work was the Sweepstakes Award earned at the East Texas State University Drill Team Contest for a first division rank in jazz, prop and high kick competitions.

On Stage Plays Around

Though On Stage '75 started the year off rather slowly, things soon began picking up as many projects came their way.

On Halloween night Drama Club created a Spook House in the cafeteria which was a big success. Dramatists fixed themselves up as goblins, fortune tellers and other such freaky creatures. Many people came to be amused and somewhat frightened by them.

An attempt to create the play "You Can't Take It With You" was unsuccessful because of lack of rehearsal time. Producing Charles Dicken's "A Christmas Carol" for the Christmas assembly showed the extreme concentration and dedication involved in producing a play. Although they did not place their play "Goodbye to the Clown" in UIL competition, the star of the performance was chosen to be a member of the All-Star Cast.

Honors Overflow Through Dedication

Helping with the Library Story Hour, typing report cards for Middle School, trick or treating for United Nations Children's Fund and receiving a service award for outstanding contributions in the Cystic Fibrosis Drive were activities on which Future Teachers were a major part.

The tedious job of preparing for District Convention paid off as the Taylor Chapter was named "Best Chapter" along with several other awards.

More time and effort were spent to prepare for State Convention. Members worked constantly on their candidate's campaign for State Office. They received an award for one of the Top Ten projects and scrapbooks and also second place for their non-commercial yearbook.

A banquet at Rudy Mikeska's Barbeque climaxed the year for FTA members. Speaker, Jack Roberts, discussed job opportunities and new officers were installed, bringing forth another year.

Helping Themselves and Others

Future Homemakers of America changed this year when a representative to executed meetings were elected from each class. Finances for the year's events came from a concession stand and the sale of Stanley and Tupperware products.

Style shows and open houses involved FHA girls in activities. More than 80 young women aided in the cystic fibrosis drive, and all members made favors for rest homes. FHA also encouraged people in the self-improvement "Encounter" program. Seamstresses made and repaired learning materials and gave parties for the children at the Child Development Center. Twenty-seven Taylor girls attended an area FHA meeting and six continued on to the state conference.

Knowledge From Books to Life

As an integral part of the homemaking co-op class, Home Economics Related Occupations offered a class for adapting to human relationships when working. All members of HERO worked in homemaking related jobs. One class a day provided a place to gain knowledge about the working world.

The club met and discussed business during classtime. A football game concession stand financed the year's activities. The major project was visiting and entertaining residents at the SPJST rest home on alternate Fridays. The employee/employer banquet ended the year.

Raising Crops and Stock

Future Farmers of America completed a school year of attending stock shows, money making projects, raising animals and working to improve the school farm.

To help pay for expenses, the club had their annual fruit sales along with a calendar sale.

In October, faculty sponsors Emerson Brister and Steve Suchomel attended the National Convention of Future Farmers in Kansas City.

From selling fruit to working on the school farm FFA members found some way to keep busy.

School Work and Fun Along With Employment

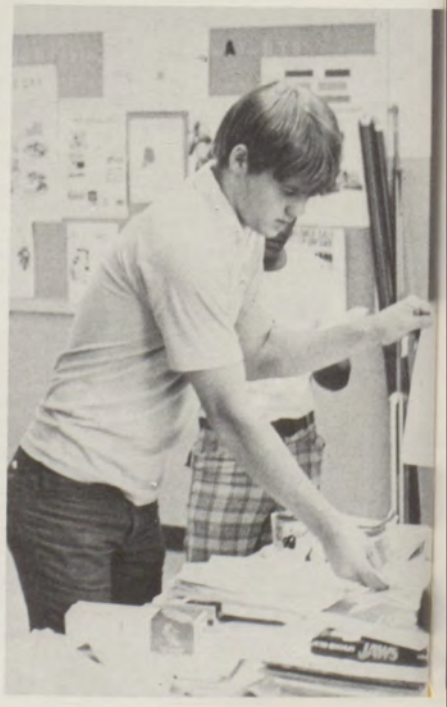

Distributive Education taught marketing and retailing, and Distributive Education Clubs of America served as a social outpost for DE students. DE students worked along with classes at school and had little time left to join other organizations. The activities of DECA provided plenty of outside projects for working students.

To get the club off to a good start, two members attended a leadership conference. For their Christmas party, DECA held a private celebration at the Big Cat. Work intensified in January in preparation for the service project and contest in February. Two people from Taylor went on to the state contest. As usual, DECA operated KTAE for a one day broadcasting session.

Work continued all year, but the club also had its share of fun. For the Spring Fling, DECA thought of the pony ride, and members took turns leading youngsters around the school on the backs of two ponies. With Industrial Cooperative Training they played a basketball game. To end the year, the employee-employer banquet was held.

Working for a Job and Graduation

Industrial Cooperative Training prepared young men and women in the skilled trades of their choice while they completed requirements for graduation. Thirty-one members filled the class and worked at sixteen different occupations.

ICT needed only one money raising event - a concession stand for a football game. The money went for the service project this year. In December the class purchased and decorated two trash containers for the Taylor Activity Center. ICT also bought and painted barrels for the Taylor High parking lot.

An initiation in October took place in the vocational room, and a Christmas celebration occured at Noack. Besides the parties, seven people from Taylor participated in the District Contest on March 21 in Austin. Three of the seven qualified for the state contest in April. The events of the year closed with the employee/employer banquet.

Active in Locals and Nationals

Office Education Association served as a place to further clerical abilities. Juniors and seniors in the lab stayed in the classroom two classes a day. A senior co-op third period provided a class for working students.

To supply money for projects during the year, OEA handled a concession stand at the first home football game. The second money-raiser was the sale of Tom-Wat products.

OEA played a vital part in the banquets and shows of other organizations at Taylor High by printing programs and tickets for the Choir, Spanish Club and Future Farmers of America. THE TAYLOR DAILY PRESS received help from OEA during the Vocational Week when they listed the names of people in vocational classes.

Ten outstanding students displayed skills in a contest held in Dallas in April. The parliamentary procedure team placed in the national contest in Chicago. The employee/employer banquet closed the year.

Builders Lay Foundation for Future

Building Trades classes constructed two houses on Lake Drive and attained excellent craftsmanship for future jobs.

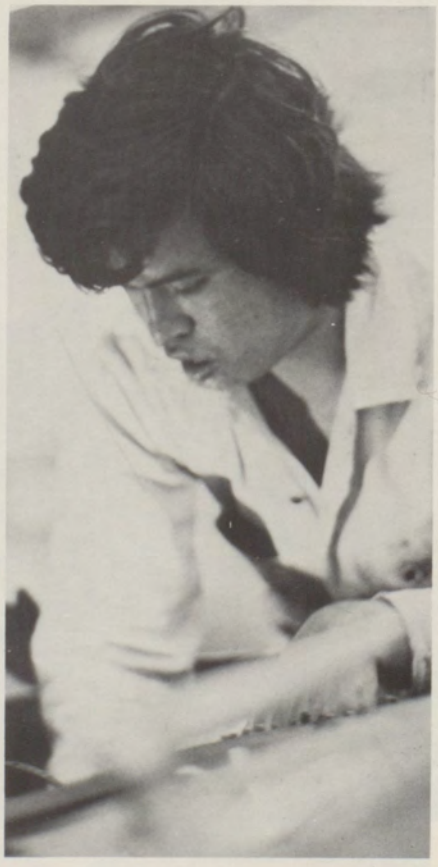

As the two houses went from foundation to finished product, students acquired the skill and labor that goes into building a house.

Besides working on the homes, the Building Trades classes also built storage buildings which were sold. The money raised from these projects financed barbecues for the builders.

When the jobs were finally finished, the young carpenters had much pride in their own work.

Mechanics Drive Toward Experience

Inflation sent everyone searching for bargains and many teachers and students found a savings in vehicle repairs at the Auto Mechanics shop. Not all members of the three hour classes were Taylorites. Two boys, Duane Finn and Stephen Heineke live in the neighboring communities of Hutto and Thrall.

On March 21 mechanics travelled to District V VICA Skill Olympics entering skill speed and projects display events. Duane Finn, Clint Herzer, Randell Kolinek, Mark Moffit, Bill Sitman and Phillip Waggoner all placed in skill or project events while Harlan Bachmayer, Gary Gaydos, Stephen Heineke, and Tony Ortiz went on to compete at the state convention.

(Left) As Michael Freeland reaches into the tool cabinet, he decides what is needed to finish repairing an engine. (Below) Derrick Hubbard discovers why the engine is malfunctioning.

Without people, "school" is just a building which houses lockers, desks and chalkboards. It is the students and teachers who make school come alive and create a useful place for learning, living and loving.

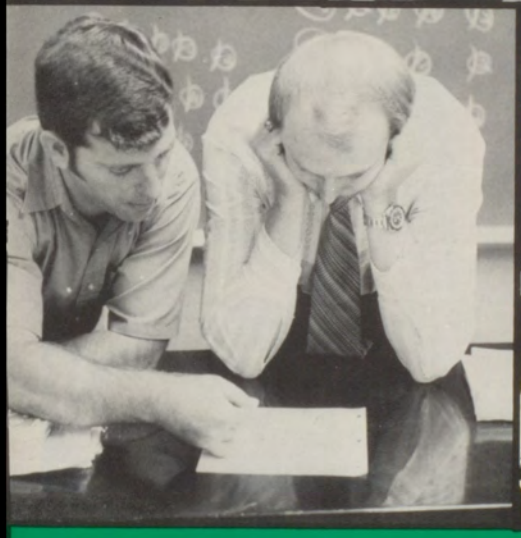

Working on Homecoming decorations was a class project. Sophomores Marie Grieger, Becky Kubala and Donna Lutz begin planning their door with hopes of winning first prize.

Sarah Berry gets a preliminary taste of graduation by posing for her cap and gown senior portrait.

With different attitudes towards pep rallies evident, students come together anyway, mustering as much spirit as possible.

PEOPLE

In appreciation of fine football spirit, cheerleader Joy Ponkoney awards the coveted Spirit Stick to Sophomore Class President Scholley Buzan.

Since their marks are left to posterity this year's seniors, juniors and sophomores will never be forgotten.

Daniel Steffek, Cren Naivar, Baldamar Salazar and Daniel Talasek fully realize that they are upperclassmen as they prepare for their senior portraits.

Teachers need help, too, especially when Eddie Spiller and Jack Rambo confer on a science problem.

Spirit ran high for some people as Lisa Corbett shows her concern for the Ducks at a pep rally.

School Authorities Plan Next Year

The school board is the policy making body for the Taylor Independent School District. It relies on the hired administration to run all the schools based on the board plans. The '74-'75 board was greatly concerned with introducing the quarter system at high school for the next year.

A new state law concerning education has made the quarter system mandatory in all schools by the '75-'76 school year. As a testing ground, Middle School went on the quarter system during the '73-'74 school year. Next year, the elementary schools will have very little trouble converting to a tri-semester school year, but high school will have some difficulties.

The school board and high school administration worked together to decide how the quarter system can best be used at high school. Members of the school board are (Left to Right): T. W. Holmstrom, president, busy at Taylor Floral Co.; Shannon B. McMakin concentrating on some business for the Texas National Guard; Dr. R. Dale Cummings pausing between his patients at the clinic; Fred Switzer, vice-president, broadcasting at KTAE; Roy Meiske discussing a deal for Taylor Manufacturing Co.; Albert Buzan, secretary, relaxing at his home; and Dr. Crawford Daniel studying one of patient's cases before consultation.

Joe Scrivner is Taylor's superintendent. After advising the school board on the decisions they make concerning school policy, Mr. Scrivner sees that the decisions are carried out in all the schools. He oversees the hiring of teachers and other school employees.

Taylor High School Principal Howard Oliphint ensures that high school policies follow those of the school board. Among his other duties are finding teachers and recommending them to Mr. Scrivner. He also supervises class scheduling and the student registration.

Assistant Principal Ross Baldwin helps Mr. Oliphint in the administration of high school. Mr. Baldwin handles most of the discipline problems. He gives instructional supervision by visiting the classrooms and making comments to the teachers as well as planning faculty meetings and in-service days for the teaching staff.

Being a sponsor of the National Honor Society fills many hours for Judy Rohde. With a B.A. in history and English from the University of Texas, Ms. Rohde teaches freshman and junior English classes. Macrame, sewing and bridge are a few of her favorite pastimes outside of school.

Charles Schroeder carries his interests, wood working and drafting, into the classroom where he teaches drafting. Mr. Schroeder is a graduate of Southwest Texas State University where he received a B.S. in Industrial Arts. He gives his aid to the Student Senate and the Freshman class.

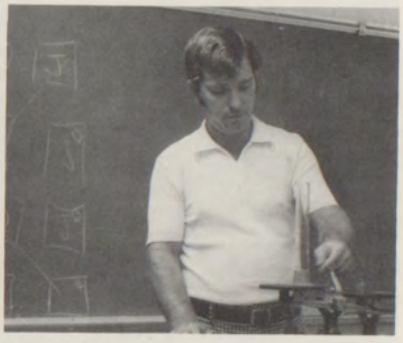

A graduate of East Texas Baptist College, Dan Sherry has a B.S. in Math and History. At THS he teaches geometry and related math and sponsors the Chess Club. Among Mr. Sherry's favorite pastimes are canoeing, travelling and playing chess.

Jeanne Sherry came to Texas from Carlow University in Pennsylvania where she earned both a Bachelor's and Master's degree. Besides teaching physical science and chemistry, she is also a Sophomore class sponsor. Traveling, canoeing, camping and sewing fill her time.

Robert Simpson, a graduate of Howard Payne, holds a B.A. in Mathematics and a M.A. in Math. He teaches Introductory Algebra I and II, related math and American history. He sponsors the Freshman class. Mr. Simpson enjoys watching sports and being with his children.

Eddie Spiller, physical science and related math teacher, graduated from Angelo State University. He holds a B.S. in Biology. Coach Spiller sponsors the Senior class and his pastimes are playing tennis and golf and listening to country and western music.

Marilyn Tennill is a graduate of Trinity University. She received a B.A. in both English and Latin. All the Distributive Education classes are taught by Ms. Tennill, and she is the sponsor of DECA and the Freshman class. Besides owning six horses, Ms. Tennill is also interested in painting.

Behind the Scene Aides — Invaluable

(Right) Pearl Wheeler is the community school visiting aide. She checks on students during extended absences and counsels those who want to drop out. When students are ill at school and have no transportation home, Ms. Wheeler supplies it.

(Above Left) Dorothy Gilligan is an aide to Robert Simpson and all the related math teachers. She works in the ESAA lab and helps the teachers in preparation of math materials. Specializing in working the ESAA reading lab, Elizabeth Zetak is an aide for George Murray and his reading classes. As an aide in the resource room, Hallie Streit does secretarial work for Betty Porter and does instructional work with resource students. Helen Rivers aides Mr. Murray and Odessa Mackey in the reading and math ESAA labs. She prepares and distributes material for the reading and math classes. (Above Right) Rosella Rieger can be found in the office or in the library. She helps as a library aide to Mary Jean Livingood and keeps the attendance record for the school. (Right) Even though Velma Loeve is officially Howard Oliphint's secretary, she doubles as the school secretary and does duties all around the school.

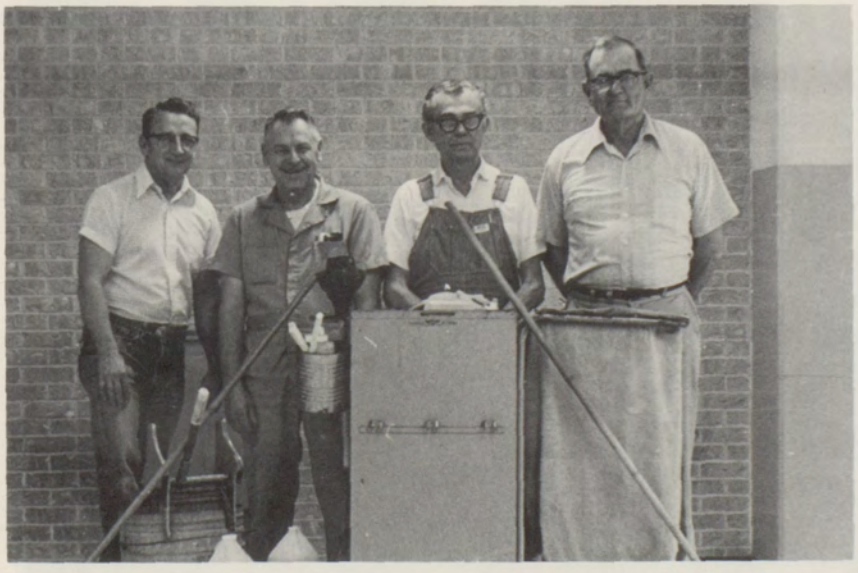

(Left) Cafeteria workers Lorene Brunken, Ruth Hill, Joyce Kuykendall, Millie Reiger, Erna Wutrich, Ella Huser, Elsie Volek, Ruby Achtruth, Margarie Hirstus, Ella Sorenson, Olga Kaase and Thelma Barran prepare the noon meal daily for the school population. They worked hard to cook balanced and nutritious lunches for all the schools.

Reliable Workers Within the School

Grads Survive ABC's to XYZ's

Coming together from different elementary schools did not bother the seniors of '75. Through all the fun of a busy last year in high school, graduates formed long-lasting friendships.

"God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can and wisdom to know the difference," was chosen by the class as their motto. The song was "The Long and Winding Road;" flower, the yellow rose and colors were blue and yellow.

Upperclassmen barely managed to get enough help for money-raising projects to help finance the senior trip. An early year bake sale fell short of expected profit as did the concessions at the Cotton Boll Relays.

Graduation finally became a reality when it was time to snap senior portraits. Other indications that commencement was near was the routine credit check in the counselor's office, beating brains out on SAT. ACT and achievement tests and ordering invitations. An unexpected thrill went through many seniors as they were measured for caps and gowns, and those scholarly enough ordered their honor cords.

New Projects Net Funds for the Prom

Relieved to find they were past the halfway mark, juniors experienced a year of anticipation and excitement.

A winning Homecoming sign proved to be well worth the long hours of work they put into it. Selling decals, running the Gatesville concession stand and preparing a barbecue in the spring were a few of the ways they acquired money for the prom.

Though class participation was often a problem, the juniors overflowed with spirit, and they showed it by winning the spirit stick.

For most juniors, looking forward to their final year made everything worth it. For an unusual number of them, however, graduating early was the thing to do so they could get a head start on their futures.

Cooperation → Success

After surviving one year as freshmen, enthusiastic sophomores started the year off with a bang.

During football season, their continuous display of spirit and liveliness earned them the spirit stick two times. By running the concession stands at the Belton football game and at all the home basketball games, they managed to clear a large profit to add to their ever-growing treasury.

A new point system helped the eager sophomores plan early for their senior trip and to increase class participation.

The number of sophomore drivers increased daily, it seemed, as the graduates of summer drivers education celebrated sixteenth birthdays with a driver's test.

Excitement overwhelmed them when at last the time came for senior rings to be ordered. Trying to pick the suitable color and style proved to be a difficult task.

They took pride in a successful year as the long-awaited end of the year arrived and sophomores moved up one step closer to the top.

Fresh Contributions From New Faces

Adjusting from middle school to high school presented the major problem for freshmen the first few weeks of school. New schedules, new teachers and unfamiliar halls greeted fish at the beginning of school until new habits became routine and freshmen settled into high school's pattern.

Freshmen quickly became involved in activities around school. One of them even planted a tree on school grounds and offered to care for it during the year. During football season the whole class banded together to win the spirit stick by bringing fishing poles and decorating the student center. A successful bake sale in November provided all the finances needed for the beginning year of high school, so freshmen planned no other money-raising project.

From upperclassmen at middle school to low men on the totem pole at high school was a big jump, but finally starting the last four-year stretch of public schooling made it worthwhile.

Come Back and See Us Sometime

The end of another long day is marked by the usual ritual of leaving school. While some free-spirited students merely jumped on motorcycles and wheeled out of the parking lot, the more studious ones dragged notes, books, musical instruments, etc. out to their cars. There were only two basic escape routes leading students away from school - Mallard Lane and the highway. But either path was full of speedsters at 3:30, some who wanted to hit the tennis courts and others who simply headed for home to watch television. No matter how rapidly students cleared the school parking lot, it never seemed adequate as they often dreamed of having their own personal helicopter to carry them home.

This is where it happens. People learning to work, play and live with other people for their own fulfillment and for the good of the community.

These halls never sleep; they continuously echo the joys and frustrations of a growing town. At the end of the day, Taylor High still resounds with pride in not only the concerned citizens who make education possible.

A sure indication of a progressive town is when more stores are built and new ideas are formulated. Area merchants have done much to support the school and the students. Their good will has been reciprocated and highly appreciated by Taylor High.

Representing the expansion of the business district, new stores such as this Seven Eleven are being constructed outside of the downtown area.

A wide variety of shops are crowded along Main Street.

It is always time to save when shopping in Taylor.

Despite the mode of transportation, all Taylorites eventually make it into town.
