Loose '90

After last year's outrageously different book, the Mallard staff spent many long, agonizing hours contemplating this year's theme. Finally, it hit us — since most of us felt stressed out about one thing or another, we just wanted to bust loose, spread our wings, and try to rise to new heights.

This proved difficult for the staff at first since most of us didn't know diddley between a spread sheet and a layout. (A spreadsheet has nothing whatsoever to do with a yearbook!) Anyway, we managed to muddle through the first semester, and we finished the year by producing another zany, crazy, exciting book; one that reflected not only our own aspirations and anxieties, but those of our fellow Ducks as well.

Our theme? Well, we didn't have long to wait to see if we had chosen the right one. School started off with the Ducks soaring through football season, and this seemed to set the pace for a lightening swift, all time soaring year. All in all, we think you'll have to admit that students at THS were extraordinary at BUSTIN' LOOSE!

HOMECOMING '90

No one knew how successful our teams would be. Oh, we knew that the football team had big hopes; they had worked hard and stayed in training. Talk could be heard around the locker rooms about going undefeated. The team and coaches never doubted that they would go to the playoffs again this year; the team reeked with talent and the desire to win. Although the spirit of the student body started off slowly, as the players' attitudes rubbed off a bit on their friends, their enthusiasm also began to rise. Momentum picked up with each victory.

Homecoming seemed to arrive quickly. It seemed that in the past, many things had had to be removed from the occasion. This year we began to add back a few. We began with a SURF Spirit dance on Friday, a week before the big game. Also, a Spirit Walk was held on Thursday. Duck fans walked from the high school to Memorial Field. Afterwards, students gathered for a car rally.

On Homecoming afternoon a long pep rally was held at Memorial Field. It was hot, but everyone managed to show their spirit. The only solemn thoughts concerned the Americans who were in the Perian Gulf; we took a few minutes to turn our thoughts to our friends who were either over there or possibly on their way. At the pre-game ceremonies, Anna Flores was named Homecoming Queen, while Candy Kallus and Cyndi Gonzalez were named Princesses. The night ended with a big victory as the Ducks defeated Austin High 27-3.

Everyone knows that friends are one of the most prized possessions in life, no matter what age we happen to be. However, there is one particular time in all of our lives that these friends seem to play even more of a major role than usual; this time is high school.

At this special time, friendship seemed uniquely valuable because everyone felt the need to have someone to tell secrets to, to share problems with, and to get advice from; we also wanted someone to spend some time with and to just be there for us when it seemed that we were the target of major stress from one direction or the other, whether it be school, home or other friends.

At THS, we were especially lucky. You see, almost everyone at Taylor High had gone to school together since kindergarten, and over the years many special friendships had evolved, and it looked like these friendships were destined to last. After all, these people knew more about us than most anyone else, and if we were lucky, they continued to like us in spite of all they knew. Of course, it wasn't easy being friends. You had to work at it and pick someone special with whom you could be yourself. This meant that you had to be able to trust this person with all, well most, of your inner most feelings.

As friends we did almost everything together, and some of our most treasured memories of Taylor High were events we had attended with friends — pep rallies, football games, dances, parties, and even classes, some of which would have been intolerable without our friends. In fact, without friends, our high school years would have been very difficult; often even boring or meaningless. If we were lucky, we had someone to share these times with, someone we called friend.

Leaders of Taylor High School gathered in September to participate in the trip to the annual leadership conference at Willis Park. As the leaders of tomorrow loaded onto the bus, they prepared to travel to a destination of fun and excitement. Filled with great enthusiasm, students and faculty sang songs and participated in a series of games before getting down to more serious business. Sophomore Kari Caplinger said, "It was a wonderful way to get to know fellow classmates and make plans to promote spirit and pride in the high school." After hearing from various faculty members and other respectable people from the community, we began by setting our individual goals as well as goals for our respectiv organizations.

As we divided into our various groups, we discussed plan to beautify our school, promote pride within the studen body, and encourage a drug free environment, one that w knew would make our school a happier, healthier place.

Finally, before we returned to school, we joined hands, san the school song, and promised to make the world a bette place BECAUSE WE CAN!

HOLIDAYS

Layout & copy by Stephanie Roznovak, Cyndi Gonzalez, & Dana Mohel

From the day school started, the question could be heard, "When is our first holiday?" Most people, students and teachers alike, just could not wait until that first official break away from the pressures of school, books, and tests. It seemed that everyone needed some free time to gather their thoughts or just of have some fun with family or friends. If it hadn't been for the holidays, many of us would never have made it.

Halloween This year was slightly different than in the past. The traditional Spooktacular was not a part of this Halloween season. Many people got caught staying home and handing out candy or finding other things with which to keep themselves occupied. Meanwhile, for the teen-agers, Smith Street was crowded with rebellious teens wanting to lob eggs at each other, and a few cars, as well.

When one thinks of Thanksgiving, they automatically think of the Longhorn and Aggie football game. UT and A&M have played on Thanksgiving for years. But for the past two years, the tradition has changed. This year, the games were changed, but there was still the annual feast of turkey, dressing, potatoes, and pumpkin pie. The Thanksgiving occasion gave relatives the opportunity to see family members they hadn't seen for a while.

Christmas was the time that most of us shared with our friends and family, although we did celebrate in school as well. Teachers and classmates got into the Christmas spirit by decorating their doors for the annual Christmas door contest. Organizations held parties and Young Life went to Colorado on a ski trip to Winter Park. This holiday season wouldn't have been complete without sending out the old year and bringing in the new. Everyone was excited about making resolutions, and keeping them.

Then again, "Who knows how many actually kept them?" The diversity of our student body brings us unique and interesting individuals. These people are what makes our High School years important and memorable.

A Blast of Diversity

Have you ever noticed how many different groups and personalities there are around any campus? Well, that's what makes it America, the land of individuality. The diversity of our student body brought us many unique and interesting individuals, and these people and our encounters with them, both at school and on the weekends, were what made our high school years important and memorable.

Each Friday, as the final minutes of our last class ticked slowly away, students all over the school would gather their books and sit, waiting eagerly for the bell to ring. While we waited, we thought of all the exciting things we would do over the weekend. Many of us would go support the Ducks at the game on Friday night, while others of us performed as steppers, cheerleaders, band members, or football players. And, of course, some of us played volleyball.

It was up to the student body to make the weekends a blast, and everyone had different ideas about what to do. Things like riding around, talking, hunting, dancing, and going to Austin seemed to keep us busy when we were through with the books and ready for a break on the weekend.

The THS student body always seemed to make weekend life a blast, even though in Taylor that was often hard to do. No matter what we did on the weekends, it was a break from studying and homework. The weekends always went by so quickly. Yeah, those were the times we would remember forever. They were a real blast!

Headed Toward the Finish Line

It had finally come down to what everyone had looked forward to in life — graduation. After twelve long years of living at home, having to be in by twelve midnight, and all the other things that had come with being in school, we'd finally made it to where we could make our own decisions. Actually when the time drew closer this seemed to prove a little frustrating and a little scary for some of us. Sure we wanted to be independent, but it was hard thinking for ourselves after we had had someone to do it for us for so long. There were so many decisions to make, decisions that we knew would affect the rest of our lives. What if we made the wrong choice? We realized we had to do the best we could, and that everyone had had to go through these same uncertainties.

Growing up had certainly gone by fast, a little too fast for most of us. It was hard to believe that the past twelve years could now be counted down to the last day. For many of us college would follow; for others working or a military career would be a part of our daily lives. Of course, some of us would decide to get married immediately after Graduation Day. But whatever happened, we would never forget all those years of growing up together: the friends we had in second grade, failing reading in the seventh grade, bomb threats, research papers, "Puttin' on the Ritz," and going to twelfth grade orientation. Finally, reality really had struck as we ordered our invitations and our caps and gowns. We knew then it was our last year, but it was great!

Taylor High will now be a memory for all of us whether we want it to be or not. We all grow up eventually, luckily, we had each other to depend on. This seemed to help us along the way through the good and bad times, however many there were.

THANK GOD I'M FREE!

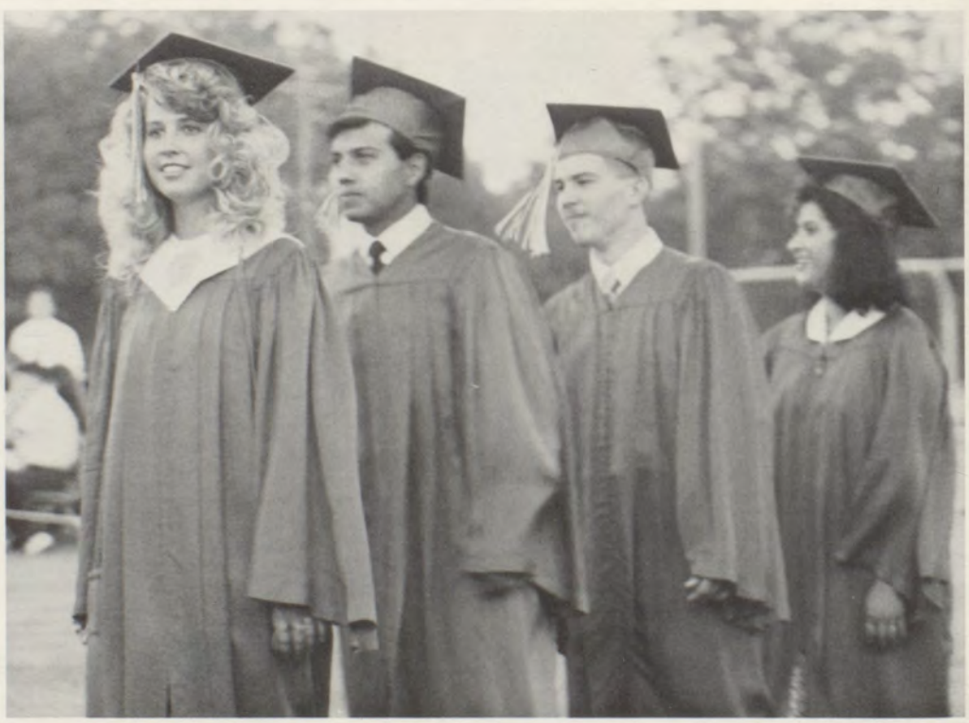

Graduation — the day we thought would never come arrived in just a blink of an eye. Twelve long, hard years of work finally came to an end for seniors on the evening of May 31. As we marched around the track and sat in our respective seats, a mixture of joy and fear lingered over us. Listening to Molly Griffith and Midhu Mathews speak about our past and our future, we realized this was it; it was time for us to go out and make our own decisions and choose what we would do for ourselves. People always told us to enjoy every single day of our high school years because they would be over in a FLASH — well, they were right. Now as we venture out into a new world, we will look back and remember our high school days. The friendships we formed and the memories we shared will forever be true in our hearts.

◄ ▲ One last time as class president before we're out of here. Shaun Rowley gives a brief speech on the importance of the class motto.

◄ Nervous, but thrilled. Kim Hill and Adria Hill smile in spite of the butterflies they and their classmates feel as the ceremonies await.

▲ Is everyone looking at us? Keli Krhovjak, Andres Leal, Clayton Leschber and Sonia Lopez march around the field to take their place for commencement. "Who's that in the crowd?"

► "This one's not for football, Dwayne." Dwayne Hyzak realizes this will be his last performance on the THS football field.

FOLLOWING THE LEADERS

THS Principal ..... Doug Ruthven

THS Vice-Principal ..... Jeanette Pott

THS Assistant Vice-Principal ..... James Bartosh

As the year started there were numerous changes around the THS campus. Perhaps one of the biggest changes, however, came in the form of administration as we received all new principals on our campus. It did not take long for faculty and students to learn to love and appreciate these new members. We found them to be open, sincere, and willing to listen. Both students and teachers knew what was expected of them and the consequences if they failed to perform properly. Instruction was done firmly, but with respect and consideration for others. Compliments if you did something good were as much a part of the day as announce ments. These administrators realize that everyone needed to know that he c she was appreciated, and they often sen notes of encouragement to faculty mem bers. And students learned that the could obtain restored priviledges b meeting expectations, and once agai Coke machines and shorts on Friday could be seen around the THS campus

As the year ended and everyone bega feeling the pressures of the close c school, we reflected on a good year, positive year. Most people felt it was th result of following good leaders. Than you, Principals!

Mardi Gras!

Everyone needs to escape every now and then, and the Junior Class of THS succeeded in giving their fellow classmates and the Seniors of '91 just such an evening. After much planning and hard work, this year's Prom theme was Mardi Gras, an appropriate one for this time of the year. Elaborate decorations filled the hall and the Student Center transforming the school into a club straight out of New Orleans. From the dragon head that led you into the dance to the masks and brightly colored flowers, the atmosphere was just right. The music was outstanding as the D.J. played songs to entertain all of the different groups; there was country and western, including Clint Black and George Strait, rap, Texas Tornados, Mexican music, and rock. Anyone who wanted to could learn a little of several ethnic dances. For example, one of the most outstanding dances of the evening was a Mexican dance called the "cambia."

After a night of dancing, many attended the After Prom Chemical Free Party. Once again everyone enjoyed food, games and the annual auction. After a long night, couples, sleepy-eyed, left to either go to breakfast or get some sleep. It had been a night to remember; one to last a lifetime.

▲ ► ▲ Six pretty ladies.... Amy Stalmach, Erin Ruthven, Shelly McAlpine, Jennifer Hejl, Heidi Zimmerhanzel, and Tammy Limmer line up for a quick prom snap.

▲ Smiles from the prom King and Queen! Clay Haverland and Adria Hill were chosen to be royalty for Mardi Gras '91.

▲ ► Dressed to the nines! Some of the senior class members pose for a picture of a night they'll never forget.

Down The Stretch

As juniors, the thought of aduation became much re believable. Two years d already passed and erything seemed to fly by quickly. We were now up-rclassmen, and we faced ny new responsibilities at we hadn't been subjected as freshmen or sopho-ores. This year had proved be our most challenging, d the feeling was frighten-g, yet exciting.

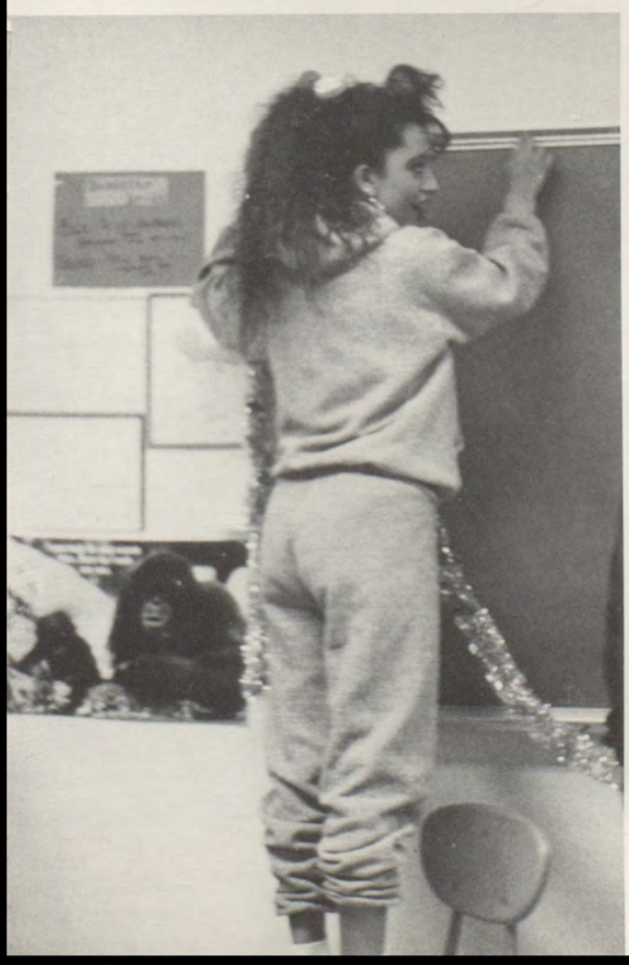

First, we had had to deal ith the new Exit Level AAS testing, which had nged considerably. Next had to concentrate on ising money for the prom, and of course, we had to study and take our SAT's. Then there were the junior research papers. With all of this, we had known the year would be a hectic one, and it had not failed to disappoint us.

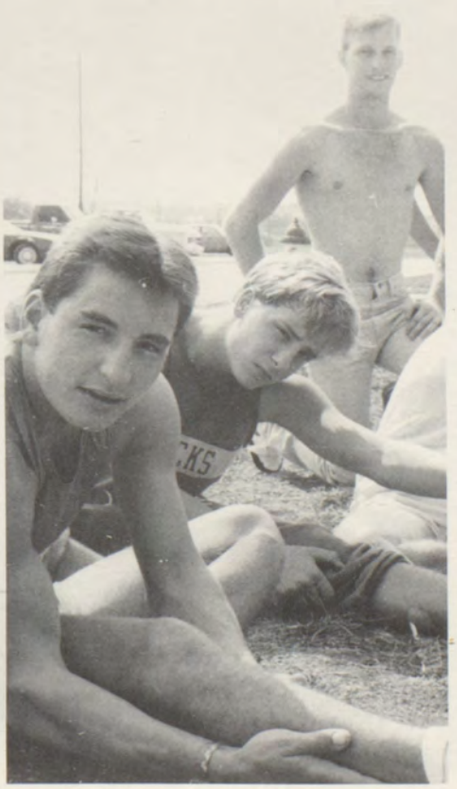

But as frightening as it all seemed, we had prepared ourselves to meet the challenges we knew we would face. As juniors, we were determined to make this year a unique and unforgettable experience, one that we would always remember, and we figured if anyone could do it, we could. And we did!

Sophomores
HALF WAY THERE

"Two down and two to go" was the feeling of this year's sophomores. The road to the high school diploma was looking shorter all the time, and no longer were we being called "fish." We were not the underdogs any more, and we had the class under us, the freshmen, looking up to us. We could look into their faces and remember having similiar expressions of confusion or fear of missing our next class because we couldn't find it.

We had more courses to choose from, so we branched out and took more electives than last year. It was a year of discovery, and a year of finding new horizons. Most of us got our driver's liscenses, and some of us even got our own cars. No longer did we have to beg for rides to and from school, or for someone to pick us up on Friday nights to go riding around. We also felt the pressures of having our own jobs and paying for our own gas.

It was a year of new beginnings, and of being one step closer to the real world.

AND THEY'RE OFF!

Freshman fears have always been a part of growing up; every person has experienced them. Although some of these have been more radical than others, most of these irrational fears have been cultivated in us through upperclassmen. So as the time rolled around, beginning our freshmen year may not have been the most pleasant thing for us to do, and although we had no choice in going, we drug ourselves out of bed for that horrifying first day of high school .

Standing outside with our fellow freshmen classmates, we tried not to show the building queaziness that knotted our stomach. We were hoping we didn't look like dweebs. Little did we realize all of our friends were experiencing the same feelings.

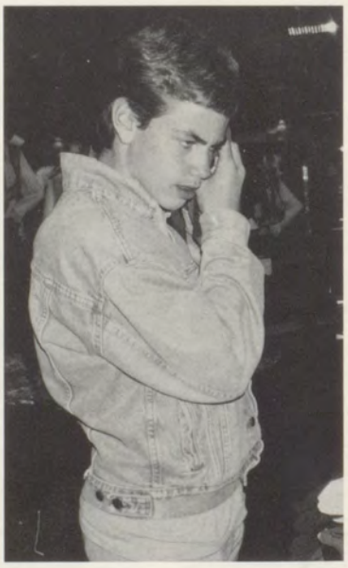

Finally, as the last possible second passed for us to make a break for the farthest place from school, the bell sounded for us to go in.

And there it was. . . What you thought was sure to be torture and pain turned out to be the best year in your life!

ONE HEARTBEAT

The August heat was sweltering. It was at this time that we would find our leaders. As our few seniors checked in, we knew it would be a rough season.

While our nervousness intinsified that humid Friday night, we knew in our hearts that to be the district champs we would have to beat Georgetown,and that meant stopping their premier running back, Andre Hill. The outcome was a tie of 12-12 and a district championship for us. We won on penetrations.

As we loaded the bus for the playoff game in Baylor Stadium, all we had on our minds were the Athens Hornets. As we ran onto the field, we knew that it was going to be close. Although our speed and stamina were far superior, we ended up with a heartbreaking tie. Even though we lost by one penetrations, we still had outstanding efforts from our all-district players: Charles Clark, Mark Jackson, Heath Talley, Valery Jackson, Kevin Demps, Eddie Collazo, Todd Parsons, Mark Nunez, Jesse Delgado, Eric Wagoner, Lance Haag, Chad McMakin, Dwayne Hyzak, and John Salazar.

We felt that all of the hard work in off season, intense summer practice, and Thursday night meetings had brought us closer together. This feeling of closeness and respect for one another had made us perform as one unit, having "one heartbeat."

THE LEARNING FIELD

This was what we had been looking forward to since we first started football years ago. We were finally getting to play high school football, and as freshmen we were ready to strut our stuff. As we reported that hot August day, we kind of knew what to expect. Of course, some of the upperclassmen had filled us full of horror stories of leg cramps, thirst, vomiting, and unrelentless running. And, this August proved hotter than ever. Somehow we made it through the greuling two-a-day practices during the intolerable heat, and we had a winning season, too.

As expected, this was a year of transition for the J.V. team, and although we played well at the beginning of the season, we barely missed a district title. Of course, this was no reflection on the team itself because, as usual, some of our key players were moved up to play on the Varsity team. We played the best we could and looked forward to the time when it would be our turn to be moved up. We knew we would have to prove ourselves worthy to be on Varsity, and this was the learning field. We were always on exhibit, both to the fans and the coaches, and we were determined to work out hard. If we couldn't move up this year, we wanted to be ready for next August.

Every athlete knows the key to a successful team is practice and very hard work. The members of the varsity volleyball team discovered it requires much more. Cooperation and teamwork proved to be the greatest factors in compelling their team to do well. Their time had to be divided between learning the skills of volleyball and producing a unity.

Their attitudes often varied from being easily discouraged to being elated. However, the team members learned to accept each others' moods and focus their attention on perfecting the techniques of playing volleyball. A lack of self-confidence was also a major conflict that each palyer had to over-come.

Finally, combining all their talents, they pulled it all together beautifully. For the team, improvement and victory was the goal they undertook, not only at every game, but also each day in practice. Their spirited efferts and strenuous, hard work, did not go without reward either. At the end of every game, the girls succeeded by satisfying themselves in a game well played. Being ranked second to last, previously the Lady Ducks surprised many people in tying for third place.

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE

It was our season, but volleyball was a sport that had often been overlooked by some sport's fans because of the mere fact that volleyball season coincides with football season. To keep our fans, we had to have a good season, and we were a young team this year. Being that the Varsity had to live up to the expectations of at least a playoff and preferably a title, we felt some pressure, but not so much that we weren't able to play for fun. After all, we were really doing this for ourselves as well as the fans. So, the attention and expectations of the community were thrown off to a certain extent. This allowed us to play for ourselves, and not just for others. Without the pressure, we played more calmly, more freely, which allowed us to win many of our most important games.

Being a young team, consisting of mostly freshmen and sophomores, we knew that our season would be demanding. This just made us work that much harder. They may have been older, however, we showed other teams, who were mostly juniors, that we would not be just an underclassmen easy defeat. As a team, we exhibited much promise for the future by defeating most of the teams in our district. We knew with continued hard work, we would build a better future for the Taylor Lady Duck Volleyball teams.

At the beginning of the season, the Taylor coaches talked to heir teams. They were looking for well-improved teams this ear because they very much wanted to start the 90's with a ang. In other words, they wanted to outshine the 80's. Going nto the season, the Taylor Duck basketball teams looked like hey were going to live up to their dreams and aspirations. his year was special too, because we were going to play Georgetown again after a two year separation. They had gone o 5A, and we had stayed at 4A. Pflugerville, however, had moved up to 5A, and Georgetown was placed back into 4A competition.

As the season progressed, the team looked like they would make the anticipated playoffs. Finally, the Ducks were one game away from going to post-season playoffs, and they came up a little short, losing a tough one to Belton with a final score of 49-58. The Ducks, however, were impressed with their overall season.

The Ducks also received recognition when Sterling Simms and Charles Clark were chosen All District. Second team All District picks included Jeffrey Jansky. Even though it was a good year and some of our team received outside awards, our biggest reward was pride in ourselves and our team.

COMPETING TO BE THE BEST

What makes a team great? Is it just the number of games they win? Every great basketball team must have pride and determination, and the Lady Ducks had both of these throughout the entire season. They worked hard and played as a team. Although they failed to make it to the post-season playoffs, they demonstrated their will to win their games. The Lady Ducks ended the season at 5-5 and 14-11 and finished fourth in district. Likewise, senior LaTonya Ephraim won a spot on the All-District team, and Lucille Wright and Patricia Dominguez were awarded Honorable Mention.

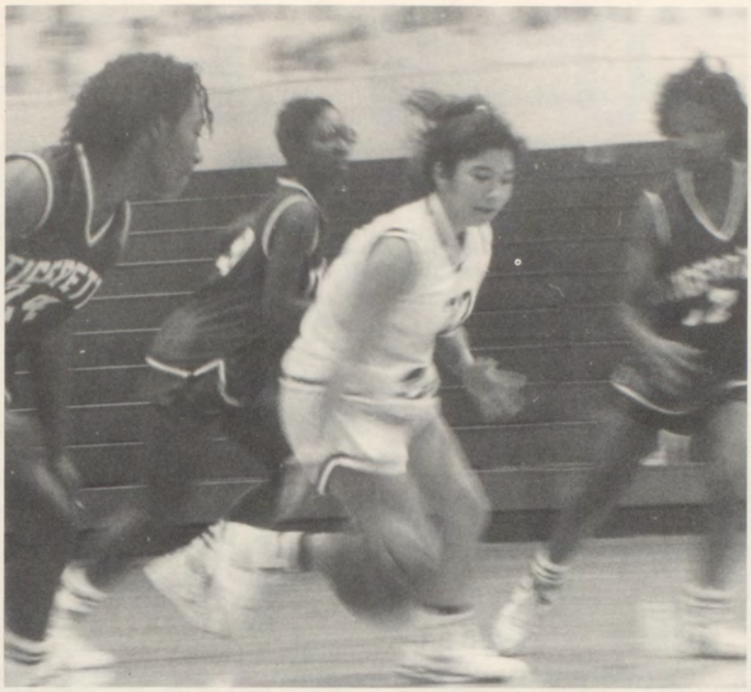

Overall, it was a good season for the Lady Ducks. Our freshmen and J.V. teams used their abilities to get a grip on the tough season and the even tougher district competitions. When the season ended they knew they had been successful; they had done their very best, and they represented their school well.

"I thought we did a lot better than last year. We won a lot, and we had a lot more talent." - Coach Dee Jones

COMPETING TO BE BEST

Each year as the season begins, we wonder just what it will hold. Of course we would like to win all of our games, but in reality, we know that this is not always possible. There are many things that go into a winning season. Some years things just don't fall our way. Although this year was not the most successful year in JV history, we felt like we had still accomplished a great deal considering all of the obstacles that we had to overcome. Luckily, the team had a determination that was sure to lead to future success. No matter what the score, we always went out and gave it our best shot, and every team that we played had to work hard for a win over us. There were many reasons for the obstacles we faced. For example, some of the people we were used to playing with quit; others were moved up to varsity. Everyone, however, learned by trial and error realizing any mistakes we learned from this year would benefit us next year.

The freshmen boys had a good season considering this was their first at high school. Pride and determination were the main ingredients in their team. They did not concentrate on losses, but focused on doing their best. Even though their record wasn't perfect, they knew they had always done their best. They ended their season with five and five.

Keeping the Dream Alive

Every year the goal of each sports team is to play their very best and achieve outstanding honors in the process. The Taylor Tennis team had an extremely memorable year no one will ever forget. At times it seemed difficult to learn the different stratagies our new coach had to offer, but at the end of the season, everyone was pleased. In the fall, the team fought hard at the district team tennis meet only to take home third place after falling to Georgetown by one set. To prepare for the spring, much hard work, practice, and determination filled the minds of all players.

As the season came closer to the end, the district meet was right around the corner. At district, five players qualified for the regional tournament. However, girls singles player Heidi Zimmerhanzel deserved a pat on the back for her fourth place win at district. During the regional tournament everyone's eyes were set on state, so as the doubles teams reached the semifinals, the dream of making it to state was only two sets away. Unfortunately, the duo of David and Reichenbach fell to Corsicana. However, it was like a dream come true for seniors Keli Krhovjak and Nicole David, for after four years of hard work, they qualified for the state tennis tournament by taking home the first place honor. Hopefully, we, the Taylor Tennis team, will keep the dream alive and strive for the very best in the years to come.

Although it is very difficult being thought of as the JV team in some sports, this was not true for the JV Tennis team. Our situation was unique. Sure, with us being the J.V. team, we were thought of as the less experienced tennis team, but we tried our hardest to accomplish all that we could, knowing if we tried hard enough we, too, could play varsity.

But even though we were just J.V., we were treated the same as Varsity, just rated on a different level. We played in the same tournaments and were all considered members of the Taylor tennis team.

The season went by quickly as we played in places such as New Braunfels and Kerrville. Ending the season, we finished District in Georgetown with Dawn Urbanek and Patricia Dominquez winning the girl's doubles' title. Even though the season had ended, we knew we still had to work hard to become Varsity tennis players, and this year had just kind of wet our appetites for what was to come next. We would be ready!

OUTSTANDING YEAR

Although the season began slowly, the Ducks had an outstanding track season as usual. Both boys and girls track teams participated in numerous meets in the Texas area. For example, the boys attended the Waco Midway Relays (Varsity placed 3rd and JV placed 2nd); they participated in the Cotton Boll Relays (Varsity and JV placing 1st), the Lockhart Relays (3rd and 2nd), the McCallan Relays (Var. 4th), and the Allison Relays (both 2nd). They also competed in the 400 and the 1600 relays at the Texas Relays this year. At District, Varsity won by 35 points; they really dominated the competition. JV barely lost by one point! Nine members of the boys' track team plus two alternates advanced to regional competition. These included Mark Jackson, Marvin Jackson, Edwin Hill, Val Jackson, Kevin Demps, Charles Taylor, David Koonce, Brian Aldridge, Albert Garcia, Hardy Jackson, and Patrick Wilson.

Outstanding sophomores included Terry Gault, Charles Taylor, and Robert Stoglin. Outstanding freshmen were Hardy Jackson, Patrick Wilson, and Oscar Moreno.

A SPORT "4" LIFE

The golf team was a little smaller than the average size team we had had for the past two years. This did not prove to be a problem, however, for what we did not have in quantity, we made up for in quality. For example, the girls golf team only had four players, and during district, you had to have at least four people to qualify as a team. Due to illness and other sports, the girls had to play individually. As for the guys, they had enough people to compete on junior varsity and varsity levels.

Golf may look like such an easy sport, but it took a lot of hard work and dedication. Although, Coach Potts was always understanding and said, "Just do your best and have fun," we realized that he wanted us to, and we had to, take the game more seriously. Although four year member, Dana Mohel was the only one to receive all-district honors, many others came very close to receiving honors. Likewise, this year the guys and girls golf teams both came in fourth in district. Although the guys had a young and inexperienced team, the freshman boys did very well, and Coach Potts should be looking forward to a successful season next year. As our season ended, we looked back on some good times and learning a sport we could use throughout our entire lives.

ALL IN THE GAME

As the baseball season began, the Ducks no longer considered themselves as a rebuilding team, but a team that could make the playoffs. Hitting, pitching, running, and fielding were all a part of our daily routine. Even though the practices were long and tough, we still enjoyed the fun before and after practices like sliding in mud, having contests such as who could get the dirtiest in one slide, and just being with our friends.

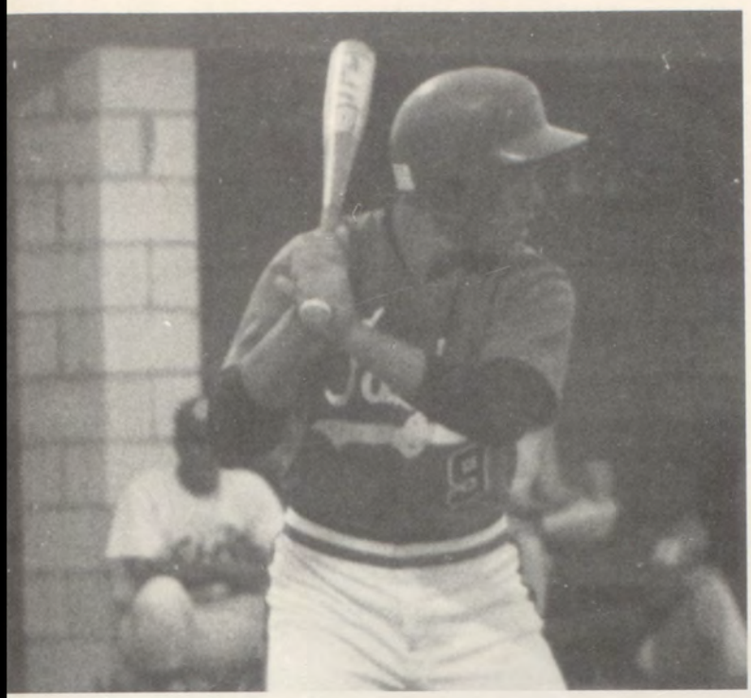

When the first game approached, the Ducks were hoping that the way they were practicing would carry into the season. Even though playing well was a key element to a successful season, there was one more element that could help the Ducks, fan support. Fan support and being backed by the crowd built confidence in the Ducks and lit hopes of returning to the playoffs.

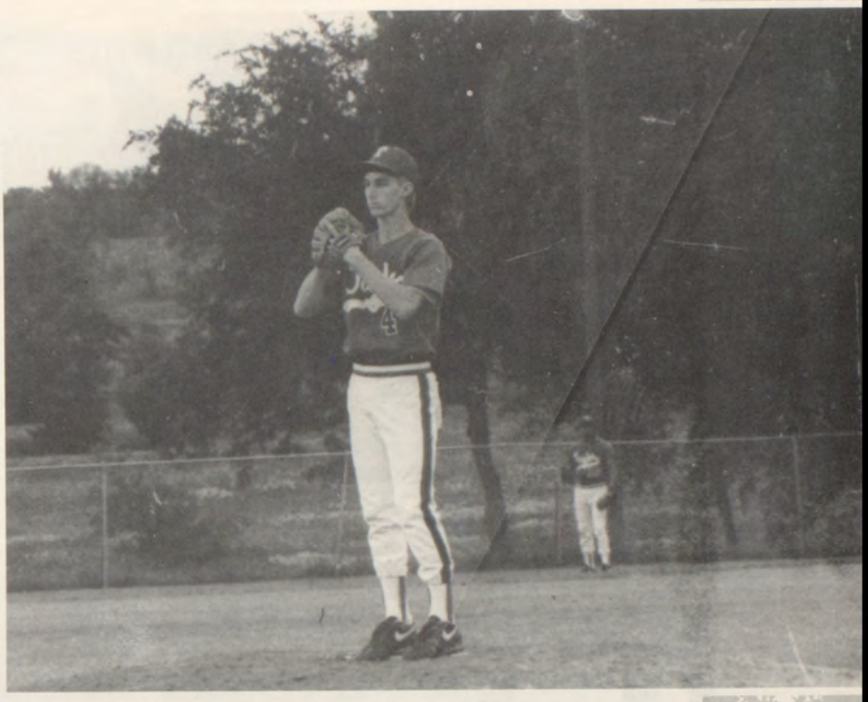

As the year ended, it did not turn out exactly as we had hoped, but we had had a good year, one to be proud of, and we knew that there would always be times when the breaks would fall to the opponent, leaving our dreams unfulfilled. We also knew we would begin at that moment looking to next year's season when we could try again and hope for fate to be on our side.

Something For All

When you think of art, what exactly comes to mind? The classics, charcoals, pastels, weavings? At THS art was a means of being able to express yourself in various forms. In fact, art class included something for just about everyone whether he liked to draw, paint, weave or design ads or homes. It was exciting to see the wonderful exhibits put on by the art department this year. Often drawings or paintings hung proudly on the library wall for everyone to enjoy. We were impressed. Most of us had not realized the enormous talents our fellow students possessed.

We also enjoyed coming together as an organization this year, The National Art Honor Society. We worked hard to strengthen our organization, and some of our members gained major accomplishments as they entered various contests. For example, Oscar Gonzalez, Kevin Demps, Carlos Garcia, Paul Salazar and Andres Leal all entered an Austin Area Competition at Palmer Auditorium. All did quite well in the contest, but Oscar Gonzalez placed second.All in all, we felt like we not only learned a great deal about various art forms and histories, but we enjoyed every single moment from creation to praise.

While Learning

DECA Officers for 1990-'91 are: Jessica Urbanek, Edwin Hill, Luis Garcia, Rose Olivarez, and Millicent Miller.

One very important aspect of a well rounded educational program is the vocational department. For various reasons, many students both need and want to be able to work and furnish their own money. ICT and DECA are both cooperative training programs offered to students at T.H.S. Many students enrolled in these special classes this year for the opportunity to go to school for half a day while working for the rest of the day.

ICT — Industrial Cooperative Training — prepares high school students for employment in occupations classified as skilled or technical; this also includes some medical areas. Students who thought they might be interested in such fields were encouraged to try ICT.

DECA — Distributive Education Cooperation of America — employs students at jobs that pertain to the sale of a product, service, or idea. Members can earn credits working at their jobs, along with extra money to help out with family expenses or to further their educations.

ICT and DECA both help prepare students for their careers and teach them to deal with people of various age groups. But, mainly these organizations provide a way for high school students to earn money and get a taste of the "real world" while still in a learning situation.

FFA

▼ Joyce Hluhan shows off her first sale as she works in the concession stand at Schroeder's calf sale.

As Willie Nelson has said on numerous occasions, "Farmers are special people; without them where would our nation be?" Therefore, many of us planned to follow in the footsteps of our parents or ancestors and chose to join Future Farmers of America. We needed to know all we could about our chosen field; after all, this, like any other profession, had become so refined and branched that it covered many areas. For example, in FFA, we learned horticulture, agriculture, welding, or animal science. Some of us learned the importance of careful planning and management, crop rotations, nutrition, and how to produce the best crops and livestock. Each of these areas had changed drastically over the years, thanks to modern technology and science, and we enjoyed learning about all of the advancements. Likewise, some of us chose to show our skills by showing animals in the various livestock shows such as the Williamson County Show.

FFA set up many projects for the school year. They participated along with the 4H to raise money by working in the concession stand at the Schroeder's Calf Sale. They also helped tremendously by improving the landscape of our school. By the end of the year, we had a well manicured lawn complete with new flower beds and flowers. It give us all a real sense of pride and accomplishment. School had never looked so good.

Money & Training

Since school must prepare all individuals for the future, school can mean many things to many people. For example, to some, school might include some type of work program. For many THS students, working was a part of their daily lives. However, many of these students didn't have enough time to go to school all day and work at night. Therefore, they enrolled in a co-op program. One such program was the Home Economics Related Program, also known as HERO. In this program, students were able to go to school a half a day and then to work the other half.

By working half a day in resturaunts, nursing homes, day care centers, and clothing stores, these students earned two things: credits needed for graduation and a little extra money. Working students also learned the skills of how to work with and how to care for others. And these skills that they learned in high school would help them become better prepared for their future careers, no matter what they chose to do.

Earning money and credits for graduation aren't all that these students receive. Most of all, they are learning more about themselves by helping others.

Pride & Glory

As usual, Business Professionals of America burst into the new school year with a great start. The 1991 officers were elected and many new faces joined the successful club of vocational students. One of the first major events came in December when club members gathered for a special Christmas dinner to help celebrate the new year.

During the year, all the sponsors worked diligently to prepare all their students for the upcoming regional contest held at Bowie High School in February. The students did very well, and twelve of them advanced to the state contest in various events. The state competition was held in Houston, and the students who participated in it stayed at the Hyatt Regency downtown. The sponsors who attended the state competition were Jeannie Hill, Barbara Leschber, Pat Rogers, and Marilyn Tennill. At the state contest, Becky Turner, Shelley Collins, and Jennifer Hejl placed in their respective events.

Since Becky Turner placed first in her division at the state competition, she, along with her sponsor, Pat Rogers, attended the National Competition in Orlando, Florida. Wow! What a trip. And, best of all, Becky placed second in her contest in Nationals, making her school and sponsor extremely proud of her.

Better All the Time

Each year the UIL program at THS gets better and better. First of all, more students than ever before are trying out for UIL, and each year, we have more people who place at district and thus qualify for regionals. This year's district contest was once again held McClennan Jr. College in Waco; one packed bus and one van escorted students and sponsors. This year the following people placed at district: Gordon Cabiness (3rd) in Keyboarding, Molly Griffith (3rd) and Carrie Zeplin (6th) in Literary Criticism, Marsha Kokes (2nd) and Misty Laurence (6th) in Ready Writing, Kristi Shiller (5th) in Editorial Writing, Misty Laurence (5th) in Spelling, Jason Manning (3rd) in Lincoln Douglas Debate, DeAnna Sandsoval (4th), Judy Rivera (6th) in Informative Speaking, Elizabeth House (4th) and Bret Safarik (6th) in Persuasive Speaking. Gordon, Molly, Marsha and Jason advanced to regionals; DeAnna Sandoval and Elizabeth House advanced to regionals as alternates. We were extremely proud of all of these students.

In May, the participants of UIL once again boarded a bus. This time, however, we headed toward Austin for a trip to Elizabet Ney Museum followed by a trip to Zilker Park where we ate a picnic lunch and took in the sights. After an enjoyable day and a quick bus repair by Ken Cooper, the tired, but happy group returned to Taylor.

Prepare For Success

Being one of the busiest organizations in the school, FTA activities started about four weeks before the regular school year. In August, FTA officers made "Welcome to Taylor" packages for the teachers new to our school system. Next, we decided to welcome the student body by putting their names on duck feet around the school.

In the fall, we operated a concession stand to help our chapter raise enough money to attend the state convention and later give local scholarships to outstanding FTA members. The District XIII convention was held in Taylor this year. Here we made plans to attend the state convention. Later in the season, a few of the FTA members helped out with the Dentist with a Heart program. Others wrapped gifts for the two foster children we sponsored at Christmas.

February, too, was a busy month. We once again sold carnations as our big fundraiser. We also attended the state convention in Austin. At the awards assembly, Stephannie Volek received the $1000 TSTA TFTA 90-91 Teachers Prepratory Scholarship. We also won an Apple Award for having one of the top ten scrapbooks in the state and for our top ten project. District XIII, likewise, won a plaque for increased membership. We were very proud, and we realized our four extra preparation weeks had helped immensely. Yes, we were very busy, but all of our hard work had been rewarded.

A Distinct Honor

The National Honor Society is a very prestigious academic and service organization. The year began with members working extremely hard selling suckers and hosting a chicken fried steak dinner in order to raise money for two scholarships to be given at the Awards Assembly. Likewise, they collected food for the needy at Christmas, helped with the Duck Waddle and acted as servers for the Rotary Honors Banquet. At Christmas they held their annual party at Mr. Gatti's.

This year twenty-five new members were inducted into the society during a candlelight ceremony held in the THS auditorium. In order to become a member, a student had to be nominated by a teacher. Then students were checked to see that they were leaders in the areas of academics, service, leadership and character. But, getting into NHS was only the beginning. Once students are in, they are expected to maintain the qualities that led to membership.

At the end of the year, the two $500 scholarships were given to Treasurer Shelley Collins and Parlimentarian Stephanie Roznovak for their outstanding contributions to the organization. At graduation, sixteen seniors proudly wore their NHS collars signifying them as leaders moving out into the world to continue their service to others.

Math Rocks

If you think Math is just one of those necessary academic courses that can't be fun, think again. Mu Alpha Theta, a club full of math enthusiasts led by Mrs. Dixie Ross, combined fun and learning skills to have quite a successful year.

Helping sell tickets at the annual Cotton Boll Relays was one way this club provided service for the school. In addition, members participated in a familiar fundraiser at school....selling candy. Everyday students could be seen purchasing some type of candy from various members. The money earned helped to pay for an end-of-the-year trip to Physics Day at Astroworld. The remainder of the money was used toward the annual Mu Alpha Theta Scholarship for a graduating member. This year at the Awards Assembly the organization was able to give two $125 scholarships which went to Stacy Mehevec and Midhu Mathews.

Spanish Club

This year, Spanish was one of the most popular foreign language classes offered in T.H.S. It was a great way to bring us closer to the culture and history of the Spanish countries that surround us.

In addition to the class, the Spanish club was offered for the students to participate in various activities that involve the Spanish language and folklore, such as the annual Cinco De Mayo lunch held in the Spanish room for the Spanish students.

This year, the Club held a car wash to raise money for the annual Spanish Club trip.

This year the club travled to San Antonio to visit a museum exhibiting Mexican works of art dating from Pre-Columbian to the present. To many of the students touring the museum, the artworks exuded pride and love for the Mexican culture and heritage. The students also visited the River Center Mall and the Market Place. The trip turned out to be a success, as well as a great learning experience. Everyone who went had a great time.

Although the year may have been hectic for the Club, they managed to get through it and are looking forward to an even better one next fall.

Et Tu, Master?

One of the most exciting electives at THS has been Latin Club. You might ask, "How can learning a foreign language be fun?" You think, "I have enough problems trying to speak proper English." Even though students were expected to learn to read, speak and write a foreign language, the days were filled with fun, excitement and something new and different.

This year the students participated in the Ides of March Exhibit held in the school library. At one time this was an annual event, but now it is held only every other year. The exhibits were outstanding, and one could tell that many long, hard fun-filled hours went into the learning creations. With these exhibits, not only the Latin students learned more about this early culture, but other classes came in to learn from them.Have you ever passed the Latin room and wondered what the group was singing? Mrs. Schaefer helped make Latin more interesting by teaching her students songs in Latin. One song was sung for the student body at our Christmas program. Then, there was Slave Day! That was the "celebration?" to help welcome new members into Latin Club. Also, they had fund raisers and raised enough money for a trip to Ft. Worth and two scholarships.

The old saying, "There's never a dull moment" could definitely be applied to this group. They were learners, but they made the learning experience fun. We thought it was great. "Et tu?"

Sprechen Sie Deutsch?

Wie Geht's! or How are you? This was one of the many sayings heard as students passed the German classroom. German Club at Taylor High School had proven an extremely interesting and enjoyable organization. Since the beginning of school, German Club members had worked hard to prepare for the regional German contest Sprachfest held at Southwest Texas in San Marcos and Houstonfest held in Houston. Several students participated in events such as poetry or prose reading, t-shirt or gingerbread house designs and even an adventuresome scavenger hunt. Fortunately, a few of the contestants advanced to the state competition.

To be sure, however, the club was not all work; they found plenty of time for fun. For example, selling candy to to raise funds for an end-of-the-year trip was a big hit for many of the members, especially the chocolate lovers. Students also had the opportunity to learn and study the many customs and traditons of the German culture through various German activities. With new knowledge and a firm background of the new language, students knew they would continue to benefit from their active participation in this extraordinary class and club.

WHAT'S HAPPENING?

No one realizes all of the hard work and dedication required to produce a good publication. Most people think it is something that can be done at a desk or computer with only a few hours of work. Most realize that you have to have some really good pictures, but few realize how difficult all of this can be to bring together. After all, one must consider the human factor and fate in all of this. Cotton Boll members did an excellent job this year as they published their newspaper six different times, once every six weeks. Mr. Ochoa and his staff kept the students at THS well informed concerning the many happenings on campus. They also did a really good job of covering other news-breaking events.

This year, we were especially proud of Cotton Boll's coverage of the Mideast Crisis and its effects on our students. Also, they had an excellent news analysis on teen drinking problems.

In April, Cotton Boll entered their overall newspaper design and feature news articles for state-wide judging. At the UIL competition in Waco, Kristi Schiller placed fifth in editorial writing. Mr. Ochoa and his staff were especially proud of their accomplishments which were beneficial to so many students.

Every student knows that challenges and responsibilities are a major part of life. For some these things come at an early age. Certain students in our school, therefore, prepared themselves for these endeavors by joining Future Homemakers of America. These students learned ways of conquering some of today's challenges such as running a home, taking care of children, helping out in the community, and even holding a certain job for a certain length of time.

Although there was a time when FHA was basically for women, this program is no longer just for the girls. Today as more and more men become involved in the household and child rearing responsibilities, this program seems especially helpful for them, too. Being in this program has helped students understand that they need to know more than the person before them has known.

One student put her feelings about the program this way, "FHA has helped me out a lot," stated senior Serena Tealer. "I am able to run a home, keep my daughter, and attend school at the same time."

No matter what roles students have had to take on, FHA has helped them understand themselves and their responsibilites, and take an active part in accepting these new challenges.

Full Speed Ahead

At the end of each school year, preparations for the upcoming year must be made. One organization that has to end the year by pushing full speed ahead in these endeavors is Student Senate. This group has to plan during the summer because their jobs start even prior to school when they begin welcoming students and faculty back from summer vacation. The organization also leads the school in student government, elections, spirit building, and patriotism. As the year commenced officers and others were busy with their individual and group tasks, trying to make the year enjoyable and beneficial to all. Trying to please a student body of 700+ could get laborious, but all of the Student Senate members seemed to take their places at the helm with ease. They realized that all eyes were upon them for leadership, and they performed to the best of their abilities.

Likewise, their duties included representing the school to other schools at sports events. Members were asked to exchange pleasantries and gifts of goodwill with opposing schools. Our image was at stake, and these individuals made us proud to be a part of THS. At Homecoming and Christmas, the group organized our festivities. Toward the end of school, they participated in showing the upcoming freshmen around campus. All in all, these were the people that helped us have a better year.

Positive Alternatives

Trying to set good examples for the other students was the main goal for the members of SURF (Students United for Responsible Fun). These students aimed toward showing others that it was okay to be in a crowd without using drugs. In order to get people to realize you can have fun and be chemical free, SURF sponsored many activities. During football season and at the end of the first semester, two successful dances were held. In addition, a day trip to San Antonio was organized; many students thoroughly enjoyed this trip.

The week prior to Prom, SURF declared an Alcohol Awareness Week. During the week students could be seen attending presentations concerning teenagers and alcohol. To make students aware of the consequences of drinking and driving, red ribbons were tied to the student cars. One day at the end of the week, the entire student body participated in an extremely serious activity. Every twenty-two minutes, someone was declared dead because of an alcohol related accident. That person was unable to talk for the remainder of the day, just as if he or she were really dead. The purpose of this activity was to show students how serious it was to be messing around with alcohol and vehicles. SURF members felt that if we could provide students with alternate, fun activities and vital information, we might be able to save lives.

More Than Fun and Games

Since we all had such busy weeks, we didn't have time for extra activities. But out of all the organizations we had to choose from, Young Life seemed to be on everyone's list.

Every Monday night at the First Taylor National Bank Civic Room where we met, we didn't know what to expect. Whether it was a scavenger hunt, passing a lifesaver from toothpick to toothpick, or Crud Wars, we always had a great time. For some of us this was our time to relax and be ourselves. We sang, laughed, and just let loose for awhile.

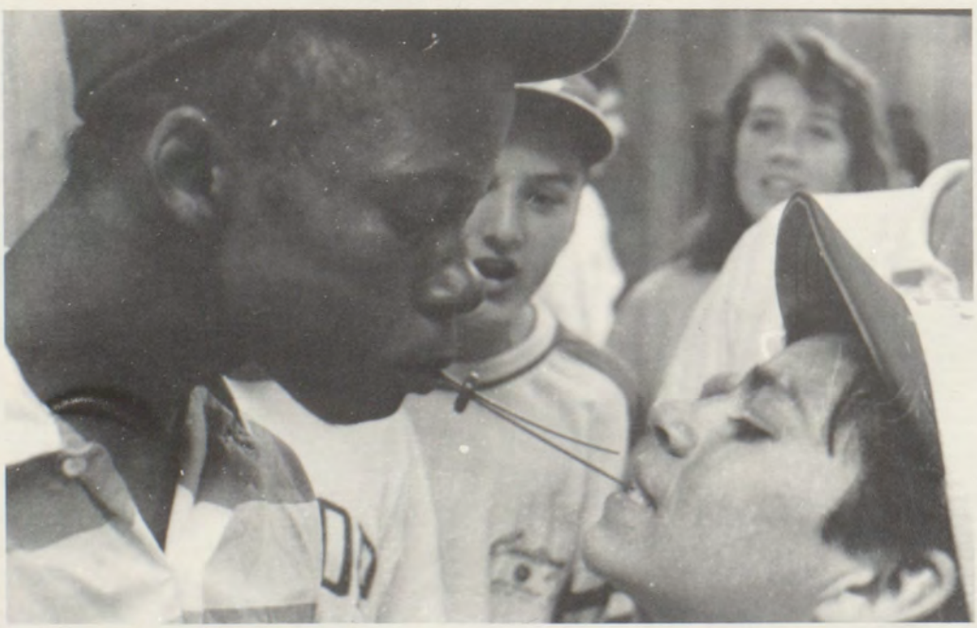

However, Young Life was not only fun and games. It was a time to share fellowship with our friends, but most of all, learn more about Jesus Christ. Because of Young Life many of us did learn a lot about Him, ourselves and each other. This was why we chose Young Life.

Another Life To Live

At one time or another all of us have wondered what it might be like to be someone else. For the students involved in speech and drama, this thought often became a reality as they were given the opportunity to try out and perform in various roles. For example, a student might be Charlie, a retarded man changed into a genius, or he might be the doctor who has learned that his experiment has failed. Still another type of fantasy might include one of the classic characters found in "The Wizard of Oz".

Whether we were dressed in the costumes of other people or personified animals or objects, we learned different perspectives about life. We actually got to crawl into the skin of the characters and become these people for a while. Many of us realized that these roles might help us understand others and their actions a little better. Perhaps it taught us compassion. Or perhaps it gave us an idea of what our own future might hold, the feelings and the responsibilities we had not really looked at before. But the best part about all of this was that we were able to return to ourselves and our present lives. As the saying goes, "All the world's a stage". Had this been our dress rehearsal for life?

UP TO EXPECTATIONS

From the time they are little, many young girls dream of being a Hi- stepper. The drill team always made it look so easy, but in reality, it required a lot of skill and hard work, not to mention determination. Practicing long, hard hours everyday, and some weekends, was just one burden the Hi-Steppers had to endure to reach perfection. We also had to suffer stress and sore muscles.

At the beginning of football season, as usual, we were forced to adjust to the addition of new members. Like all drill teams, we had complications getting use to one another, but somehow we managed to stick together during our performances and work as a team. We found that this was a necessity if we hoped to accomplish our goals and live up to expectations.

After football season, we quickly began preparing for contest in Katy. We worked especially hard, and we weren't disappointed when we brought home several trophies to show for our effort.

Also, it was time to perform for basketball games and to begin work on our annual Spring Show. Being a Stepper kept us busy, but we enjoyed every minute of the challenge.

This year, like all other years, proved to be a busy, yet productive year that all the Hi-Steppers of 1990-1991 will always remember.

Proud To Be An American

After the events of football season and contest faded in our memories, our thoughts turned to Spring Show. It was tradition to put on a performance that would thrill the community both with our dances and our elaborate costumes. We knew we were in for hours of tedious practices. The first thing we had to do, however, was select a theme. This year it was easy. We decided upon "Proud to Be an American" because many of us had had or still had friends or family involved in the Persian Gulf War. We wanted these people to know how proud we were of them and our country.

Along with numbers expressing our patriotism, award winning contest routines and solos were performed. Each number seemed to captivate the audience and hold them in a state of awe at the graceful beauty of the dancers decked out in their impressive costumes.

The seniors were very enthusiastic, yet sorry to see their Hi-Stepper years come to a close. However, as with previous years, everyone put every effort into making the show its usual success.

WE STAYED POSITIVE

When we tried out for cheerleaders, some of us had no idea what that entailed. We thought we just had to lead cheers. Even before school and football season began, we got busy. We started the summer with an N.C.A. cheer camp in San Marcos. We learned cheers, dance steps, and pyramids, but it wasn't all fun. We had to get up at 6:00 a.m. to get dressed, eat breakfast, and walk to our first class, which began at 8:25 about a mile away. Each day, we were evaluated on spirit, organization, loudness, stiffness, and jumps. All the hard work paid off, however, and we returned with four superior ribbons, the Safety Award ,the Squad Achievement Award, and the Spirit Stick, which counted for our four day stay. We were also an Award of Excellence nominee.

Now the work at home began. We had our Little Girls' cheer camp. This helped pay for paint and other necessities during the year. Our next job was two-a-days. We visited the guys at the field house and gave them drinks and snacks. School began. Pep-rallies turned out to be more work than expected. We planned the cheers, skits, and speakers. We painted signs and gathered costumes. We were busy people, but when the day of the game came, we were even busier. When the crowd gave up, we had to get them back into the spirit and cheer the team on to victory.

Sometimes it was hard to be positive, but we kept on cheering until we pulled ahead. Becoming Bi-District Co-Champions made us feel glad that we stayed positive.

New Beginnings

This year marked a new beginning for the band. New uniforms, new faces, and a new attitude were all ingredients of the "Mean Green" marching band. As marching season started, we had been rehearsing for two weeks before the first game, so we felt prepared for whatever was thrown our way.

We went to district marching contest in Austin, and although we did not receive top scores, we felt we had done our best; much better than in previous years.

After marching season ended, we had solo and ensemble to gear up for. Almost all the the students who participated in this event received perfect ratings; those who played class one music and received a rating of "one" advanced to a higher level of competition.

After that, we had concert season. We worked hard and long on our three numbers, which were "Ojo de Aguila," "American Folk Rhapsody #2," and "Chorale and Shaker Dance." The contest for this was held in Austin, and afterwards, we all enjoyed a dinner together at Fran's.

This year was a special year in yet another way for us. This was the year we took a trip to Colorado to participate in a music festival in Colorado Springs. We received a higher rating there than anywhere else all year. After the contest, we enjoyed many attractions such as a dinner theater, the Royal Gorge, the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo, and Garden of the Gods. We all enjoyed ourselves, and this will be a year remembered very fondly in our hearts.

The 1990-91 Jazz Ensemble had a very successful year. We played many jazz standards, including "Do Nothin' 'til You Hear From Me" and "The Bear Necessities". We also played raunchy funk songs like "Chameleon" and "She Blinded Me With Science." We enjoyed the many "listening days," during which we listened to a large variety of musicians and performers. Even though these were learning experiences, they were relaxed times, and we appreciated the change of pace.

We also participated in a Jazz Festival in San Marcos and did very well. Many people came down to hear us play and supported us.

Although it is said that hard work and determination can make any group successful, this is especially true for a choir. Singing often takes hours of concentrated practice, especially for long, involved performances. The THS Choir had such determination, and on any given day, one could stand at the choir room door and experience a thrill at listening to their practices. With a year full of activities to keep their talented members busy, the choir worked to make every performance not only good, but one of their best. Their performances this year included special events for Homecoming and Christmas. They also performed at the First Methodist Church.

Working to create a good group attitude was also a common goal. Because of the long and tedious work, this was sometimes difficult, but even though each choir member experienced his own struggles at times, each also experienced triumphs during the year. For example, in UIL contest members received excellent ratings while a very proud Susan Posey advanced to state competition.

Yes, singing with the choir was a lot of hard work, but it also brought a great deal of pleasure and self satisfaction. After all, singing is good for the soul, a unique form of self expression unlike any other.

WITH A LITTLE HELP

With the realization that students often have the power within their hands to help other students, the organization known as Duck Pals evolved. This peer assistance program was headed by Naomi Pasemann who instilled in this group of young people the desire to help others who needed their gentle guidance. For some students this came in the form of tutoring; for others, it was the opportunity to work with youngsters who were having problems coping with school, family, or friends. But no matter where the students worked, Northside, T.H. Johnson, Middle School, or High School, the rewards, like the efforts, were abundant. Each member could be heard relating happy experiences to their friends. Often this program led to some of the group traveling with the DARE program to encourage youngsters, even those outside the district, to make wise decisions about drugs and alcohol. Somehow seeing these young people free of chemicals often spoke louder than the words of adults. As one Duck Pal stated, "If I have helped just one person make the right decision about something as devastating as drugs or alcohol, I have succeeded. If I have helped just one person to build a better image of himself, I have succeeded. For had it not been for having someone to encourage and gently lead me, I might have chose an all together different path, a path of low self esteem, a path of failure."

CORE CURRICULUM DEVELOPS PROFITABLE FRUSTRATION

As a part of our school curriculum, there were classes that had to be taken for us to graduate. Initially, we may have wondered why, but as the year progressed, we began to understand the importance of learning. We saw that we would either use them in the coming years in other classes or perhaps even in the line of work that we were already beginning to think about. By taking these classes, we learned three things that would be an important part of our future lives: responsibility, respect, and project completion. These classes were important because they gave us a basic understanding; we knew we had to do our best to achieve all that we needed to know, and perhaps even more if we wanted to do great things. You might say that these were the blocks of the foundation upon which we were building our futures. Sometimes the going was really tough, and the hours of frustration painful, especially when we felt the urge to get out and play. But, in the end, we felt proud that we had stuck with the program. We knew a sense of accomplishment; we were confident that no matter what the future threw at us, we could accomplish any thing if we were persistant enough. After all, we had broken through these boundaries, one piece at a time.

▲ Learning the importance of taking good notes, Beauhamma Broodnax prepares for the test he is about to take.

▶ ▲ Going through the attendance card, Mr. Shaver performs one of the daily duties of a teacher. "Have you finished your sponge activity, so we can start writing?" he asks.

▶ "What are all of those squiggly things?" Laura Macuk and Geronimo Ruiz look at a few specimens through the microscope in their biology class.

▼ Programming in computer math class, Kristi Schiller tries to calculate her results before the deadline.

▲ Learning the keyboard can prove quite frustrating. Brian Wuthrich works to improve his accuracy in typing.

▶ ▲ Listening is always an important learning skill. Vernon Anderson listens attentively to his teacher as she explains the day's assignments.

▶ Careful review of notes proves beneficial, as Stephanie Roznovak diligently studies for her spelling test in Word Processing.

▼ Struggling to complete a Pre-Cal problem, David Carrizales and Jason Kautz learn the meaning of persistance.

▼ "Now I get it!" Getting the picture, Jason Manning realizes how simple the Calculus problem really is.

► "I can show you exactly where the troops are moving in." Elizabeth House studies a war map in Government.

▼▼ "It looked so easy when the teacher did it!" Misti Laurence and Catherine Raesz practice their skills in Chemistry by doing some problems.

▲ "How I could really get into this Shakespeare thing." Paying close attention, Deanna Sandoval and Shelley Collins listen to Hamlet in Mrs Foley's Honors English class.

► "Who said this class was easy?" Enthusiastically, Travis Stiba works on a difficult problem in computer math.

EXCELLENCE

Just a step ahead

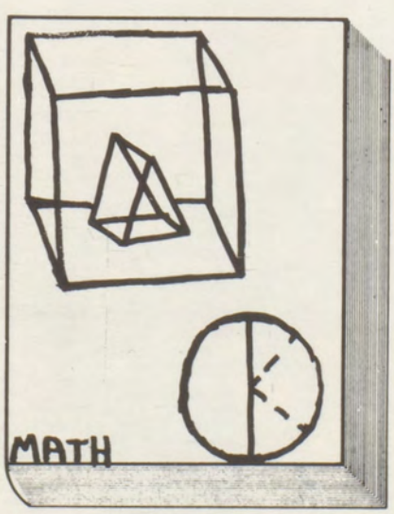

When people go through high school, there are many routes to take, but for some their efforts exceeded others'. With these extra efforts these students achieved what the others didn't, graduating with honors. The people who graduated with honors had taken advanced courses and kept their grades above an overall average of 90.

They had accomplished this by studying more and doing every homework assignment faithfully. And, these were not students who had just studied; most of these people had also been involved in many extra curricular activities, as well as other projects. These were the ones that would find it easier to get into college because they had gone beyond the middle of the road; they'd learned to study, excel, and still have fun. It's plain to see that these honor graduates were just a step ahead of the rest!

▲ ◄ Spending some time in the library is a necessity. Kim Hollub and Gena Gardenes prepare for today's lesson as they quietly study their information.

▲ ▲ "I have a few minutes during roll check." Dwayne Hyzak looks to see what a friend wrote in his '90 Mallard before getting into the day's job.

▲ "How why doesn't my Cat's Cradle look like Erin's?" Jason Rydell still looks puzzled as he works to make the desired design.Heidi Zimmerhanzel seems pleased as she states,"I've done it. Now if I can just master Vonnegut."

◄ Research is so much fun, sometimes. Cheryl Janek diligently slaves over some of the work required in her advanced class. Most all advanced classes require some extra form of research.

VOCATIONAL SPECTRUM OF THE CURRICULUM

With the wide spectrum of the curriculum, Taylor High School tried to offer something for everyone. They realized that not everyone would go to college, and even some of those who would needed to work to help defray some of the expenses. Therefore, our COOP program gave us an opportunity to work half a day and still go to school. It, also, prepared us for the future and gave us an idea about life after graduation, and what the real world was all about.

There were several different programs you could get into such as Industrial Cooperative Training (ICT), Vocational Office Education (VOE), Home Economics Cooperative Education (HECE), Teaching Experience Program (TEP), and Distributive Education Cooperative (DECA) to name a few. Each one gave personal experience in their respective business fields. For example, ICT helped prepare students with careers in construction and other technical fields. HECE prepared students for careers related to food service and child care; DECA involved students in sales, and TEP put students in the teachers' shoes, but with younger students. Each area offered some of the most valuable learning experiences, those of actually doing the job.

▲ Answering the phone, taking notes and filing are just a few of the jobs Nicole David performs as an aide in the office.

▲ ► Getting the vocational program to run smoothly is a big job, and there is always something to do. Sid Krhovjak does an excellent job of bringing everything together between school and community.

► Learning to put just the proper amount of food in an order is an important job. Louis Garcia seems to be an old hand as he fills a dessert cup at Sombrero's.

Layout & copy by Kim Hill & Lisa Farr

▼ At lunch time, Kim White works as a cashier in the snack bar for her D.E. class. It's not easy when it's so crowded.

▲ This tastes so good. Heidi Mott sends out letters to Ford customers. This is just one of her many responsibilities at Taylor Ford.

► Trying to keep up with the numerous orders, Angela Brown and one of her co-workers at McDonald's scoop fries for customers.

◄ Gosh, this tree must be thirsty. Senior Jason Talley and junior Chris Johle water a tree for their Horticulture class. This group did the new landscaping of the school. Didn't they do a good job?

▲ Cheerfully performing some of his daily duties, senior Oscar Gonzalez enjoys working in the office where he gets to see many different faces each day.

► A type.... Sophomore Gordon Cabiness perfects his typing skills, skills he knows he will use in many of his advanced courses.

Necessary, But Different

What comes to mind when you mention the word "electives"? For many people, this spells fun, excitement, and a chance to take classes outside the academic area, classes that are not only enjoyable, but classes that will continue to broaden our perspectives in life. Thus, the purpose of elective courses is to allow students to expand their horizons and develop skills and techniques that are not available in other classes. At Taylor High School, many exciting elective classes are offered. Students are given the opportunity to take classes such as band, journalism, horticulture, flower arranging, and building trades, just to name a few.

One elective, Wildlife Management, for example, teaches students to appreciate the wilderness. Students learn about hunting laws and conservation.

In Creative Foods, students learn about the basic history of cooking and cultural foods. They prepare meals and learn about the importance of certain ingredients. This course proves beneficial for the college bound student who plans to live in an apartment, or for the young person who plans to set up housekeeping right away.

Another exciting elective is flower arranging. Students in this class learn how to design and prepare bouquets and corsages.

Electives give students more options to consider for their future careers, and more skills that can be put to use even after their high school days are over. So you see, they may be fun, but they're also necessary in a different way.

▲ ▲ ◄ Listening attentively, junior Shelly McAlpine learns to crop pictures in Mallard. It is important that students learn proper techniques in journalism.

▲ It's important to learn about other cultures, too. In German class, sophomore William Jackson gives a report on the role Germany had in the Persian Gulf Crisis.

EXPECTATIONS

. . . we all have them, and sometimes things happen to change them.

But there are some expectations that never change — like the fun and comfort of a best friend, the satisfaction of a good test grade, or the chills a school song brings when sung across a lighted field.

At TU Electric, we realize you have expectations of us, too — like having the electrical power ready when you turn on your computer, put on some records or plug in the blow dryer. And when the power does go off, we know you expect it to be restored quickly.

And it will be. That's just part of our commitment to provide quality electric service to customers.

BUSTIN' OUT FEELINGS ON STUFF YOU'LL NEVER READ

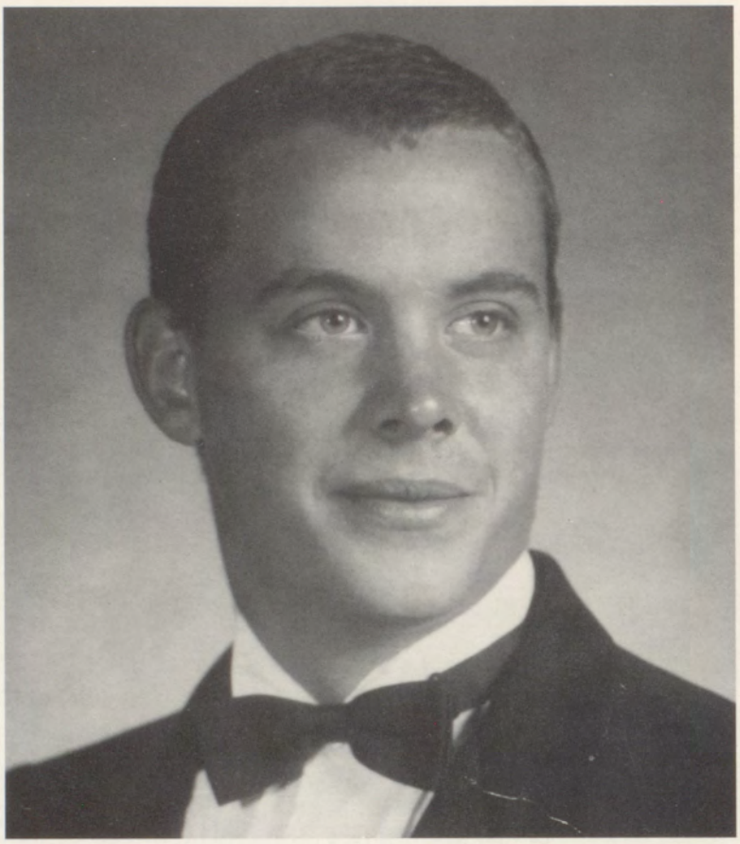

Even though no one reads this part of the book, it is our job to put it in here anyway. It's just junk about who does what and how long it takes them. This year the question was mainly how long it took someone to do something. But as you can see, we finally got it all together, and we think it turned out pretty darned good. So in case one of you out there actually reads this, here's who's responsible. Sponsor — Priscilla (Shaun quit that) Parsons; Editors-in-Chief — Jennifer (I'm gonna say something) Hejl, Shelly (That's fine) McAlpine, and Stephanie (Where's my $8?) Roznovak; Assistant Editor — Dana (Where's my Patschke's card?) Mohel; Photo Editor — Shaun (Is my picture on that page?) Rowley; Computer Operator — Bobby (Where're the cuts?) Corbell; Business MGR — Bryan (I didn't know I was suppose to make that list) Schmidt; Artist — Andrea (David's in the hall) Torres; Others Who Contributed to This Masterpiece — Matt Zeplin, Cyndi Gonzalez,Kim Hill, (Agnes) Austin Kingsbery, Mike Turner, Catherine Raesz, Anna Riggs, Lisa Farr, Angela Bradford, Amy (Flag) Stalmach, Melissa Blaha, Chris Mays, Lynn Urbis, and Jason Talley. Now for the things we must put. Our office is at 3101 N. Main, Taylor, TX 76574 (That's THS in case you were wondering). Taylor Publishing Company prints all this stuff when we're through, and Jim Anderson helps them figure out our mess. They print 330 of these 184 page books on 100 lb. paper. Special thanks to the Taylor Daily Press, Charles Durrenberger, Mrs. Potts, Mr. Ruthven, Mr. Bartosh, Mr. Caplinger and School Board, Mr. Clifton, Joe Esquivel, Johnnie Sanedra and Trekeshelia Sorrels. We're ready to bust out of here. Enjoy the book. Steph, Jenn and Shelly

Mallard

Well, it was another crazy year for the Taylor High School Mallard staff, to say the least. As you can see, we have put together another unique yearbook. Many stressful hours of hard work and planning went into the book. The staff really worked diligently and most of us were very serious about our jobs. Those not so serious, we relied on to be our gophers.

At the beginning of the year, students were flying everywhere, running errands, selling ads, and trying to figure out exactly what they were supposed to be doing. But we soon learned that we were in Mallard to work, and that's exactly what we did. As you can see, our work paid off!

Last minute details were still being added to the pages even the day before our publishing representative came to pick up our first deadline.

We gained new knowledge when it came to taking pictures, drawing layouts, and writing articles to appear in these pages. This year's staff turned out to be the biggest Mrs. Parsons ever had to deal with. We certainly did make her lose some hair this year, and those hairs left, we turned gray. But most of all, we'd like to thank you, Mrs. Parsons, for all you've done for us. Without you, what would we do?

All in all, the Mallard Staff of 1991 was quite a zany bunch of kids, and all of us are relieved that our deadlines were finally met with a smile, or at least a grimace. We hope you enjoy our creation, for we really enjoyed creating it!

As the year came to a close, all of us felt it had been fast, hectic, but exciting! We would have many memories to carry with us, some good and some not so good. We realized that with each experience, however, came knowledge. We had accomplished much. The senior class had been a winner in Anderson's Prom contest, set new records for academic excellence and helped achieve a Governor's Excellence Award. Scholarships and awards came in abundance. In every way, they had proven to themselves and others that they were special; they would be missed!

We would also always remember this year as a year of patriotism. We had been involved in a war and many of us had friends and family who served in the Persian Gulf. We were relieved that most of our troops had been sent home safe. Perhaps even in this we learned a valuable lesson — "Don't take things for granted."

We knew that the summer would be busy for all of us. Mrs. Parsons was glad we got the yearbook finished so quickly. She was impressed that a class of all amateurs had worked so professionally. From the very first we had known this would be our year for BUSTIN' LOOSE and making the most of every opportunity. Now it was our time to see what else life had in store. Til then, remember the yellow ribbons.
